New York's Law CAIRO MEETING ENDS On Death Penalty Is Found Invalid

By DENA KLEIMAN

A State Supreme Court justice rule vesterday that New York State's death penalty law was unconstitutional, in the first legal test of the law since a landmark decision by the United States Supreme Court last summer.

In so doing, Justice Peter J. McQoillan spared the life of Joseph Velez, who had been sentenced to death for killing an off-duty policeman in 1975, and reduced the aentence to life imprisonment. Mr. Velez, who is 31 years old, will be eligible for parole after 25 years.

Justice McQuillan ruled that the statute, hich mandates execution for the murder of a policeman or prison guard, was "cruel and unusual punishment" because it did not give a judge or a jury leeway to exercise discretion in deciding an appropriate sentence for a particular case.

Since Justice McQuillan serves on State Supreme Court, the trial court of general jurisdiction, his ruling is not binding on other Supreme Court justices. However, it is expected to be given great weight by them: It is the first decision giving reasons why the statute is constitutionally defective, and Justice McQuillan is conidered one of the leading authorities on the state's criminal law. But the Arab Leaders Appear to Imply That the Syrians Will Have Dominant Role

By JAMES F. CLARITY

Special to The New York Times CAIRO, Oct. 26-Arab leaders ended two-day conference bere without final agreement on arrangements for an expanded Arab peacekeeping force for Leba anon. But their closing statements appeared to imply that Syrian troops already in Lebanon would dominate it.

A fund to pay for the force was agreed on, with the richer oil-producing Arab: countries pledging to provide most of the money. After two days of sometimes rancorous argument over Syria's role in Lebanon and the composition of the peacekeeping force, the meeting ended tonight several bours later than scheduled and with an unexplained cancellation of a final open session of the 14 heads of state and senior officials representing the 21

Arab League members at the conference. It was officially announced that there would be no immediate disclosure of how many troops would be provided for the force, which now consists of about 2,300 and which is to be expanded to 30,000. The exact composition, the announcement said, will be worked out by the secretary geoeral of the Arab League, Mahmoud Riad of Egypt.

Syria Would Predominate

Arab officials said they interpreted the innouncement as meaning that Syria, which already has 23,000 soldiers in Lebanon, would make up more than half, and perhaps two-thirds, of the force. At the conference here, as in Riyadh, one of the main themes was that Arab solidarity, which had been tattered in the past year hy the Lebanese war and disputes between countries auch aa Egypt and Syria, must be strengthened concurrently. Arab leaders here muffled their quarrels with each other and indicated that they would turn their invective increasingly toward Israel, which was described by several leaders here as the chief beneficiary of the Lebanese war and quarreling among the Arabs.

It Says Forgery by Chiang Ching Led to Arrest of Her and Other Leftists

By FOX BUTTERFIELD

HONG KONG, Oct. 26-Shortly after Mao Ise-tung died last month, his widow, Chiang Ching, took out several of Mao's documents from the Communist Party's special archives and reworded them, a Hong Kong newspaper said today.

According to the paper, Ming Pao, a respected independent daily, when China's new leader, Hua Kuo-feng, discovered that Miss Chiang had removed the documents without proper permission, he ordered her to return them immediately and then discovered the alterations. The paper said that this was one of several actions by Miss Chiang that led Mr. Hua to arrest her and three leftist colleagues on Oct. 6.

Ming Pao said the story of forgery by Miss Chiang is being circulated among party members in Canton to explain the leftists' arrest and disgrace. The atory was brought to Hong Kong by a Chinese traveler who heard it from a friend who is a middle-grade official.

There was no independent confirmation of the newspaper's report. But analysts here said that it seemed in line with reports they have heard from other Chinese souces and sounded highly plausible. According to the Hang Kong news-tpaper, Mr. Hua was also angered when the discovered that someone had altered the wording of a directive Mao had written on April 30 in Mr. Hua's presence. The altered version was then published in a major joint editorial on Sept. 16. Mao died on Sept. 9.

In the changed form, the directive read. "Act according to the principles laid down." The editorial used the quotation to make the point that the Chinese people should follow Mao's policies.

Analysts here noted at the time that Mr. Hua himself did not use the quotation when he delivered the eulogy for Mao ing the Chairman. on Sept 18, only two days after the editorial came out. His omission was considered highly unusual. The quotation has not been used since Oct. 6, when the four leftists were reportedly arrested.

Before the arrest of the leftists, control over the party paper, Jeomin Jih Pao, and the party theoretical journal, Hung Chi, is believed to have rested with Yao

Chi, is believed to have rested with Yao Wen-yuan, another of the group.

Analysts here were particularly interested in the reported dispute over the wording of Mao's directive, for it seemingly involved only a slight change, the significance of which is hard to translate into English. According to the report that is said to be circulating among party members in Canton, Mao originally wrote down three directives for Mr. Hua after Mr. Hua had brought Prime Minister Robert Muldooo of New Zealand to see him on April 30. Mao asked Mr. Hua to stay after Mr. Muldoon was usbered out, and Mr. Hua delivered a report on progress in the campaign to criticize Teng Hsiao-ping the ousted Deputy Prime Minister. Mao then wrote out:
"Act gradually and don't be in a burry.

Act according to the principles in the past. With you in charge, I'm at ease." But, Ming Pao said today, when Mr. Hua reported this to a national conference on economic planning last summer, it some-

Although small, the distinction between the two seemed to be that in Mao's origi-nal version, he meant principles generally known in the past. But in the altered version, the "principles laid down," only some limited officials might know what those were and could interpret them.

The Horg Kong paper said that after Mao's death Miss Chiang had gone to the archives of the party central committee and told the archivist to give her certain documents relating to Mao. The archivist, identified only as "Little Chang," a common form of address in China, was afraid to refuse but immediately told Wang Tung-hsing, a Politburo member who was for many years head of Mao's bodyguards and now is believed to head the general office of the ceotral committee. Another major rift in the Arab world is the one between Egypt and Libya. The Libyan leader, Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi, bad announced that Libya would boycott the Arab conference, presumably because the Libyan revolutionary leader did not want to come to Cairo. But Mr. Arafat, who needed all the support he could get from hard-line radical states like Libya, presuaded Colonel Qaddafi to send at least a lowlevel delegation.

When the Libyans arrived on Mooday just at the end of the first session, diplomats and reporters were startled to find at its head Foreign Minister Abdel Moneim el-Huni, who fled from Libya to Egypt a year ago after a dis-pute with Colooel Qaddafi and then was living in Rome. ## Syria and P.L.O. Said to Renew Military Links in South Lebanon.

By HENRY TANNER Special to The New York Times

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Oct. 26-Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization, whose forces fought a bloody battle in the mountains above Beirut only 10 days ago, were reported today to have resumed some of their previous military coopera-tion in southern Lebanon. That is an area that Israel wants to keep free of Palestinian guerrillas.

According to Lebanese right-wing Christian sources, Syria has agreed to reopeo the so-called Arafat Trail, the customary supply route from Syria to the Palestinian forces in southern Lebanon. The trail is also the northern access road from Syrian-occupied eastern Lebaroad from Syrian-occupied eastern Lebanon to the Arkub, the slope of Mount

The opening of Syrian supply lines to the Arkub is not expected to lead to a Syrian-Israeli confrontation, even though may create tension in the border area. The security belt that right-wing Christian forces have established with Israeli help is to the east along the border from the Mediterranean to the area east of Merj Uyun. The supply lines through Syrian-held Lebanese territory will be under the con-trol of the Syrian Army, which will thus be able to a large extent to limit or to direct Palestinian operations. Control over the Palestinian guerrillaa has been one of the main goals of the Syrian intervention in Lebanco, Such a goal it is believed here, is approved by the United States and iodirectly hy Israel.

Palestinian officials indirectly con-firmed the reports of Syrian-Palestinian cooperation regarding the south. They said that Yasir Arafat, head of the P.L.O. and the Fatah guerrilla force, had raised the issue in Damascus on his way to a meeting of Arab leaders in Cairo and had received a promise of support from President Hafez al-Assad.

The speed and extent of the Syrien-Palestinian accommodation has come as an unwelcome surprise to the Lebanese right-wing Christians.

Sources in Ashrafiyeh, the Christian center of eastern Beirut, said yesterday and today that they feared an alliance between Syrian and the Christian leaders had run its course and that the Christians could no looger hope to obtain Syrian

Those expected to provide new troops for the peacekeeping force in addition to Syria and the P.L.O., are Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Southern Yemen, Libya, the United Arab Emirates and the Sudan. Egypt and several other countries, including Algeria and Morocco, have reportedly refused to provide troops. Some Arab countries, such as Egypt, have agreed to supply weapons.

Moscow Adds Urals Party Aide to the Kremlin's Leadership

By CHRISTOPHER S. WREN

Special to The New York Those

MOSCOW, Oct. 26—The policy-making Central Committee of the Soviet Commu-Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party wound up a two-day session today with some personnel changes that left the senior leadership ranks intact. Despite a flurry of speculation that shifts were impending, the only significant promotion was that of Yakov P. Ryabov, the party leader of the industrial region of Sverdlovsk in the Urals. Mr. Ryabov, a 48-year-old former engineer, was brought into the party's national secretariat, which with the Polithuro constitutes the inner circle of the Soviet leadership.

in view of his experience with heavy industry in Sverdlovsk, it was thought that Mr. Ryabov was being prepared to take on the supervision of the military-industrial complex that Dmitri F. Ustanov handled before he was oamed Minister of Defense last spring.

In a subtle way, the introduction of Mr. Ryabov into the leadership group confirmed the strong patronage position of Leonid I. Brezhnev, the party's general secretary. Mr. Ryabov worked his way up through the Sverdlovsk party apparatus once headed by Andrei P. Kirilenko, now Mr. Brezhnev's deputy.

Average Age of Polithuro Is 66

No other career shifts emerged from the meeting of the Central Committee, which is the agency that eodorses changes in the leadership. The dominant message remained one of stability in the ruling Politburo, whose 15 full members ow average just under 66 years of age. Among the six candidate or nonvoting, members, the average is 60 years.

Mr. Kosygin's health has since innoved, according to Soviet sources, and last week he reappeared to greet an arriving Mongolian delegation. # Unity of Rhodesian Factions Sought

GENEVA, Oct. 26—Efforts to unite Rhodesia's faction-ridden black nationalists were under way bere today as Ivor Richard of Britain continued his quest for flexibility in the opposed positions of the white and black delegations to the conference on a transition to black rule.

As African diplomats worked to bridge

As African diplomats worked to bridge the differences between the nationalists before the opening of the conference. Thursday, Mr. Richard, chairman of the conference, beld his first meetings with Bishop Abel Muzorewa and Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, the nationalist leaders who have been excluded from the seemingly property of the conference of the confere powerful alliance struck by Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

The drive for unity among the nationalists was aimed at removing one of the major obstacles to success at the conference, which was called to establish a biracial transitional government for Rhodesia

Muzorewa Speaks Optimistically

Combined with the positive note struck after their meetings with Mr. Ricbard by Bishop Muzorewa, and to a lesser exteot by Mr. Stitole, the effort to bring the nationalists together dispelled some of the gloom cast by the wrangling over the so-called Kissinger plan that bas cominated the pre-conference maneuver-

"I believe we are going to get a settle-ent," Bisbop Muzorewa, a rival of Mr. Nkomo in the leadership of the African Vational Council, said outside the Palais

Mr. Sithole, who disputes Mr. Mugabe's claim to the leadership of the Zimbabwe African National Union, one of two nationalist groups that formed the African National Council in a bid to end factional strife two years ago, said his 30-minute talk with Mr. Richard had been conducted in a constructive spirit. Zimbabwe is the nationalist name for Rhodesia.

Mr. Richard, British representative at the United Nations, emerged later. "We have had a very good day," he said. Mr. Richard's optimism came as representatives of Bisbop Muzorewa and Rev. Sithole held informal discussions with delegates in the Nkomo and Mugabe camps. gates in the Nkomo and Mugabe camps.

Mr. Nkomo told an interviewer today that if negotiations fail here, "there is only one thing left and it is real war." He said such a war would be "sharp and short," bringing black victory.

Mr. Harriman told the Assembly that independence for the Transkei was a culmination of South Africa's policy of setting up racially separate bantustans, or tribal homelands, and added:

Mrs. Chisholm Favors Moynihan; Key Black Group Is Still Reticent

Mr. Moynihan's campaign had been marked up to now by a failure to draw well-known black politicians. Reflect Polls Indicating That Senator Is Narrowing Moynihan's Lead-Union Support is Offered

With three new television commercials and endorsements from the city and state mless such property associations, should pro Senator James L. Buckley intensified his campaign yesterday to sustain what he said was momentum that had built up Mrs. Per Mrs.

One of the new commercials seems to reflect elation over recent polls indicating that the Conservative-Republican Senator has narrowed the lead held hy his Demo-cratic opponent, Daniel P. Moynihan. However, the Senator said the commer-cial had been made before release of the poll results and was almost exactly like one he did six years ago.

"It's upbeat, designed to be inspirational," Senator Buckley said of the commercial, which shows him surrounded by admirers as a voice says the people are "joining the swing to Jim Buckley."

The two other new commercials reflect the aggressive attack that the Senator, until recently low-key, has adopted against Mr. Moynihan. One shows a piggyhank being smashed with a hammer as a voice says that "Professor Moynihan's schemes" would take $60 a week out of your paycheck."

The third commercial quotes "Professor Moynihan" as having said that "black Americans should be treated with benign neglect," and that "starving Americans are idiots who deserve to starve."

The Buckley campaign will speod at least $60,000 on the 30-second commercials, which ran last night locally and will he shown all over the state.

The button's language underscores a basic political fact of life: for any New York City Democrat in Congress, Election Day is not so much a time for re-election as for simple ratification. as for simple ratification.

The chances that Brooklyn's 16th Congressional District will ever see a "Gladys Pemberton Again!" button are remote, unless such a button two years from now should proclaim a second all-but-hopeless Republican effort to dislodge Elizabeth

Mrs. Pemberton is refreshingly free of illusion about her chances. Her husband, Donald, is the local Republican district leader and was only too happy to find a volunteer for the nomination. She says her own campaign slogan should be: "Gladys Pemberton: Crazy or Coura-geous?"

A Limited Objective

A week before election day, Mrs. Pemberton, the owner of a stenographic service, is still not sure which of the adjectives applies. She is running hard and in her own mind has redefined victory to mean not defeating Miss Holtzman, but shaving her 1974 winning margin of 78 percent down to, perhaps, 55 percent.

"It shouldn't be handed to her on a silver platter," Mrs. Pemberton says of and Mr. Wolff is now expected to win her 35-year-old opponent's try for a third re-election with relative ease. It want to prove she's not Miss There is, nonetheless, one proven Hot Shot."

Teamsters Pension Fund Board Revamped as 11 Trustees Resign

proper activities for 20 years and under investigation by the Federal Government, announced yesterday the resignation of 11 trustees as part of "a major reorganization" of its board of trustees.

The resignations, coupled with one last month, mean that 12 of the 16 trustees have left under pressure of threatened Government action against them. The resignations are the result of the largest Federal push against the union since James R. Hoffa, former Teamster president, was sent to prison nearly a decade ago.

Still undecided is which 11 trustees will go and which four will remain. The pen-sion fund said that the names of the new members would be announced

In the two weeks since the trustees decided on the mass resignation, fierce infighting has reportedly occurred within the pension fund over who would resign, and the matter still has not been settled.

Indications are that Frank E. Fitzsim-mons, president of the International rhood of Teamsters, will be one of the four who will remain on the re-structered board, which will have only 10 nbers-five from the union and five from the trucking industry.

No Deals Made, U.S. Aides Say .

Federal officials said that no deal had been struck with the resigning trustees to absolve them of civil or criminal liability for past actions. But sources said that the trustees were quitting in part to end any liability for the continuing conse-quences of previous loan practices.

"This restructuring follows extensive discussions between us and representa-tives of the fund," said a spokesman for the Labor Department, which has been spearbeading the government's investigation into the Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund.

"In those, our special investigations staff expressed serious concern about the continued presence on and control of the pension fund by the prior board trustees," he said. "This became particularly acute are reaching a point calling for some critical decisions. We didn't have faith that those trustees had the competence, willingness or ability to make those decisions prudently.

Catholic 'Call to Action'

A Diversified Group of Delegates Took Full Advantage of a Chance to Recommend Changes

By KENNETH A. BRIGGS

week in Detroit, Archbishop Peter L. Gerety of the Archdiocese of Newark clasped Msgr. John Egan of the University of Notre Dame in a bear hug and exclaimed, "Jack, this is one of the greatest days in the church." The next day three delegates from New York expressed similar enthusiasm in a report before the Arch-diocesan pastoral council.

Echoes of exhilaration were reverber ating among most participants as they left Detroit for home, The extraordinary meeting bad produced dozens of bold resolutions on issues of justice. Calls for changes in the church's views toward divorced and remarried Catholics passed resoundingly, as ded recommendations to ordain women and married men.

There were immediate outcries of proest as well, and the president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops moved to calm fears that the conference could produce radical changes by re-asserting the hierarchy's right to control

Prelate Has Reservations

Archbisbop Joseph L. Bernardin, head of the hishops' conference, said that many of the more controversial recom-mendations bad been made in "haste" and that "special interest groups" played "a disproportionate role" in formulating them. The assembly's proposals will undergo review at next spring's meeting of the ishops' conference. Some, such as plans to bolster family and neighborhood life, should face little opposition and could be put into effect, while others, like the proposal on divorce, almost surely cannot be accepted in their present form. Even if such changes were approved, they could not be implemented without concurrence from Rome.

Meanwhile, those who attended the assembly saw the event as setting forth a ground-breaking trend that unleashed new forces in the church. Beyond the recommendations was the seminal character of the event itself. It had marked a departure in dialogue. People from far-flung corners of the American church has reasserted its principles of church were voicing their thoughts. The pioneering conference suggested future meetings that would serve as a powerful

The two opposing candidates for the track down runaway shops and shops are contracts. The delegates behaved energetically, eager to testify, willing to attend long sessions and showing remarkably little rancor even during the hottest debates, on such subjects as birth control. As they sometimes wrangled, worked through parliamentary rigmarole and built toward key votes, the image of an autocratic, hierarchical church Sirica for the development of a plan for protection as other countries provide for faded.

Careful Preparations for Meeting

While some like Archbisbop Bernardin thought the meeting got out of control, others said that the experience was not the result of a facile experiment or a caucus of self-appointed reformers. Two years ago $400,000 went into an exhaustive effort to winnow the opinions and concerns of an astounding cross-section of Catholics.

the union trustees, who are conducting the election, said that eligible members who did not receive a ballot would be sent one in a second mailing oext Wednesday if they notified the trustees that they had not received one in the first mailing.

William White of Indianapolis, chairman of the trustees emphasized that the The conference of bishops authorized such dialogue as their contribution to the Bicentennial celebration. Regional hearings, parish discussions and 800,000 questionnaires were among the tools used to reach the grass roots.

Acting on the bisbops' mandate to shape the resulting material into a suggested five-year program for social ac-tion, a committee, capably led by John Cardinal Dearden, Archbishop of Detroit, and the executive secretary, Frank J. Butler, prepared working papers on a range of subjects from family life to interna-

While some cootended that the assembly was not di-verse enough, others said it was the most sought this year to stay with the shoulder cootended that the assembly was not divaried in the country's history of Catholicism. Blacks, Hispanics and American Indians joined bundreds of other urban residents and suburbanites. Women made up 39 percent of the body and were central to the deliberations. Nearly 100 bishops, a third of the American hierarchy, were also there.

> The result was an opening of the floodgates of concern. Discussions were reasoned and spirited, though often truncated. Bishops took part and registered their single votes in company with others. For some it was a chance to exchange views with those they do not ordinarily meet.

The delegates also appeared eager to provide an example of openness and canprovide an example of openness and candor to offset an image of the church as overly cautious, as if they felt they were making history making history.

Further, they acted with the knowledge that their statements would be scrutinized by the bishops. Rather than tailor their proposals to what might be considered safe, they spoke in strong terms. One explanation for some of the all-out pleas for dramatic change is that delegetes were suggesting long-term goals rather than expressing immediate expectations.

The bisbops have promised to take the recommendations seriously. Some delegates have warned of disastrous consequences if their counsel is ignored.

The style and the change-oriented con-tent of the assembly is likely to encourage the moderate and progressive wings of the Catholic bisbops. Since Archbishop Jean Jadot became the representative of Pope Paul VI in this country in 1973, 41 new bishops have been appointed and others shifted to key dioceses. They are believed to form the core of a more open, democratic group.

North Atlantic Winter Bargain Rates Affected—Economy and First Class Stay the Same

By RICHARD WITKIN

President - Ford approved yesterday -a Civil Aeronautics Board decision granting the airlines some increases in winter-season promotional fares on the North Atlantic but rejecting other major ones that the carriers had sought.

The decision meant that, unless there re diplomatic complications, there will not be the customary winter-season reductions on such fares as the 60-day advance-purchase, the 7-to-8-day group fare, and other apecial bargains.

There will be only half the customary winter reduction on 22-to-45-day excursions, and the full winter reduction will be enforced on the normal economy fare. Furthermore, the airlines will not be able to implement proposed increases in firstclass fares, which do not have seasonal Under the new fare schedule, for example, the advance purchase round-trip from New York to London will stay at the current shoulder-season rate of $325 instead of dropping to the old winter rafe of $295. The youth fare will stay at $441 of $295. The young here will stay at $441 instead of dropping to $387.

The 22-to 45-day excursion fare will drop from $432 to $397, instead of the previous winter level of $363. The normal economy fare will take the fall customary winter drop—from $626 to $384.

Under the three-season concept, fares are at a peak in the June-August summer season, come down for the September-October and April-May "shoulder" periods, and normally are at their lowest in the relatively slack winter season.

No International Agreement

International fares are customarily set by unanimous agreement of the airline flying particular routes, such as the North fares through the winter, and to reise first-class fares, in order to offset increases in fuel, labor and other costs. But they could not reach unanimity on the fare schedule. That being so, the way was open for individual carriers to set their own fares subject to required governmental approvals. In this country, the aeronautics board simply did not find that all the increases the airlines sought had been justified. In its opinion, handed down last Friday, the five-member board said it remained convinced that "over the longer term, the objective of improved revenues for the industry lies in basic structural reform, rather than in increased fare levels within the present unduly complex structure."

disallowed all proposed winter-season in-creases on the ground that the airlines had failed to give adequate justification for the higher fare levels.

Airline sources raised the possibility that fare levels for trips originating in uled for after the Nov. 2 el.:

Another possible complication was the attitude of the British Government, which has been conducting sporadic talks with United States negotiators on a new bilat-eral air pact. The British team was report-ed to bave broken off fare talks last Friday after the Civil Aeronautics Board's decision became known. The view of the British, airline informants said, was that the United States had not been bargaining in good faith.

could deliver his prepared speech. Mr. Dole had all but echoed the Carter position he was attacking.

While President Ford was campaigning in Pittsburgh, his running mate went to Erie to assist in the fight for Pennsylva-nia's 27 electoral votes.

Using a speech patterned on the one the President delivered this morning, Mr. Dole continued to sound the theme that his party hopes will win the election— that the Republicans represent peace through strength, while the Democratic Presidential nominee "offers a defense based on weakness and a foreign policy based on inexperience and innocence."

As an example of what he called Mr.
Carter's "innocence or ignorance," Mr.

Dole quoted to a downtown rally what he said was Mr. Carter's position in the last debate with President Ford: "I would not go to war in Yugoslavia even if the not go to war in Yugoslavia even if the Soviet Union sent in troops."

That, Mr. Dole said, proved that the Democratic candidate had "learned nothing from history, nothing from the mistakes of the past; or else be doesn't care."

"As a potential President," Mr. Dole continued, "he has tipped his hand to be the mistake, and to potential enemies alike, talling them in advance what he will or telling them in advance what he will or will not do if he becomes President. That is no way to conduct foreign policy."

The texts of the prepared speech had been handed to reporters traveling with Senator Dole before his arrival here. At a priet news conference at the all port immediately after he landed, the Senator was asked whether he would consider sending American troops to Yugoslavia in the event of a Soviet invasion.

"The answer is no," Mr. Dole declared,
"but I wouldn't tell them in advance what I had in mind."

I had in mind."

Apparently, it occurred to him before he delivered his speech at the courthouse here that he might have stumbled, because he made a point of telling the crowd that he had been asked the question at the airport. "I would never tip my hand to an adversary on foreign polimy." he insisted. he insisted-

Mondaje Campaigns in Albany ALBANY, Oct. 26-Before Senator Dole revised his position on the subject today, Senator Mondale had demanded that President Ford's campaign organization renounce Mr. Dole's characterization of World War II.

The Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee, on an 11th-hour swing to some of his party's strongholds in key Eastern states, interrupted his attack on Mr. Ford's economic policies to address him-self to Mr. Dole's remarks.

Asked during a news conference at the airport here why he believed that Mr. Ford should take it upon himself to disavow Mr. Dole's assertion, Mr. Mondale replied that the two were "responsible for each other," and added, "Mr. Ford picked Mr. Dole, as I recall."

The Dole assertion about "Democrat wars" was interpreted by Mr. Mondale as a "desperate effort" by the Republination, Mr. Dole visited the Polish Fal-cons Cluh,

The best one-two combination in sportscasting

What more do we have to say about Mary Albert after Yessss? He is the most popular sportscaster this town has ever had. Mary is our voice and also the voice of the Knicks, Rangers and Giants. So Marv has a big edge in getting the behind-thescenes sports news fast.

If Mary is sportscasting's superstar, then John O'Reilly, the guy we've teamed him with, is its Rookie of the Year.

John is new to New York, but in Northern California he was voted

"Sportscaster of the Year" five times in the last six years. That's like having a lock on the MVP trophy.

Before that, John actually worked for Charles O. Finley, which qualifies him for awards of another kind.

Marv's on NewsCenter 4 between 5 and 6 every day, John between 6 and 7.

Catch them both. They're real winners.

If you are ready to drive the dream, there are three reasons to see Dick Gidron. Dick Gidron offers you three ways to get behind the wheel of the car most people dream of driving -- Cadillac.

You can purchase a factory fresh '77. A vast array of models, colors, standard and special features await you. And the prices are very favorable.

You can lease a factory fresh '77.

It is almost impossible to beat the price for these beautifully equipped Coupe de Villes. Cadillac quality at only $177 a month for 18 months (closed end lease) with a downpayment of but $1,500. The best service and all the rest. If you've never before considered leasing Dick Gidron will tell you about its advantages.

You can buy a pre-owned Cadillac.

Dick Gidron has held aside an excellent selection, equipped and maintained the way most people want them. These are the best of the best.

No matter which way you choose a Gidron Cadillac, you have the advantage of personal quality service. (Right now, service specials are a lubrication and filter change for but $18.95 and a tune-up for only $64.90.)

In the Bronx at 696 East Fordham Road. Dick Gidron is only 10 minutes from Westchester and an easy drive from anywhere in New York City. (The telephone number is 212-295-3000.) So if you are ready to drive the dream, be certain to see Dick Gidron. You'll be cordially welcomed - and given all the facts.

Buying...selling?

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We may have remarked a few hundred times that there is almost no food known to man that, given a purse of sufficient size, cannot be purchased in America in or out of season, be it Australian kangaroo tail, scotch grouse or reindeer from Finland. One rare and notable exception is a delicacy, peculiarly Italian, that will be available in this country for a short period begin-ning this week. That exception is fresh white truffles, one of the most extraordinary luxuries ever to touch a person's palate.

The coterie of those who relish white truffles place them oo a scale above and beyond the black variety. And whereas black truffles—frequently referred to as black diamonds—have a cool elegacce and sophistication, white truffles have a lusty, sensual, earthy taste and odor that have been described variously as decadent if not to say indecent or obscene. One gastrocome, quite aptly we think, has called the rich perfume of white truf-fles "necrophilic."

Some years ago we wrote an essay on white truffles, noting that the har-vest, most of it in the Piedmont and Le Marche regions of Italy, begins in late September and ends in late No-vember or early December. Like wine grapes, the harvest fluctuates from year to year, and the news for 1976 isn't good. We receotly spoke to Paul Urbani, the largest importer of white

The current "crop" of fresh white truffles, those gnarled marble-like fungi that are one of the most extraordinary luxuries ever to touch a person's palate, won't be great this year. That means that just one of them may cost as much as $66.

truffles in America, and he said that the current "crop" promised to be on a fraction of what it has been in years

Meeting the White Truffle

We have reflected often on our initial association with white truffles. We were seated alone one Christmas dinner in Passeto's Restaurant in Rome. ner in Passeto's Restaurant in Rome. Quite honestly, it occurred to us that we were in the presence of something unfortunate. The odor came first from the left, then from the right, and then we realized that the guilty object was a brownish-white thing like a beige-colored, gnarled marble. A waiter was grating it onto a dish of creamy fettucine.

Shortly thereafter we made the error of sampling white truffles on that celebrated pasta, and we say "error" in that from that moment on we have been hopelessly addicted to the taste. The cost of white truffles, like that of caviar, augments from year to year, and at present the cost of white truifles is somewhere in the stratosphere. According to Mr. Urbani, this year's going price is $288 to $400 a pound. There are approximately 6 to 12 white truffles to a poind, so the cost of one white truffle will range this year from about $24 to $66. They are considerably more expensive than caviar, which is now selling for a mere $98 to $130 a pound (14 ounces Russian weight).

We have often recalled with a combination of amusement and distress an incident that was one of the saddest moments of our life, and it involved a few white truffles. The truffles, by the way, are so highly aromatic that one of them goes a long, long way. Saved for a Special Occasion

Some years ago we received as a gift a few white truffles that even then must have cost something like a stone from the crown jewels. Being of generous nature, we decided we would not indulge in a selfish solitary feast. We would save them for some special occasion, perhaps with black tie and champagne and very special guests, a few who would know what white truffles were all about.

Well, the obvious happened. We stored them in rice (the traditional method of storing white truffles, the rice absorbs the flavor) in a plastic container and put them in the refrigerator. We drove to New York and the cleaning woman came.

"Lord help us," she said, 'I never knew things could smell so had. I threw those things in the East Hamp ton dump."

White truffles will be available on a limited basis from Bakkıcci's 424 Avenue of the Americas (between Ninth and 10th Streets) at $288 a pound; Maison Glass, 52 East 58th Street at $375 a pound; Manganaro Foods, 488 Ninth Avenue (between 37th and 38th Streets) at $400 a pound, and William Poll, 1051 Lexington Avenue (between 74th and 75th Streets) at $350 a pound They will be found on the menus c a few Manhattan restaurants, includin Brussells, 115 East 54th Street; Giarr belli 50th, 46 East 50th Street; El Mc nello 1460 Second Avenue (betwee 76th and 77th Streets); Il Valletto, 13 East 61st Street; Mercurio, 53 West 53 Street; Nanni's, 146 East 46th Stree Parioli Romanissimo, 1466 First Avent (between 76th and 77th Streets); Sa Marco, 36 West 52d Street, and Wildows on the World, on the 107th flox of the World Trade Center. Limited Audience in addition to restaurants, Mr. U beni has a small private clientele the includes William S. Paley, chairman the board of CBS.

the board of CBS.

It almost goes without saying the the audience for white truffles will a limited not only because of the odor, but because of their scarcity are cost as well. Plenty of Possibilities

That merry widow top has lots of possibilities—with shorts, with big, floucy skirts and with bloomers. Bloomers? Call them zouave pants. Call them plus fours. Bloomers will do. They're full pants, gathered below the knee, and they work in terry cloth as well as more exotic silks with those laced-front

They were part of a show replete with high drama as well as comic re-lief, plenty of folkloric motives (North African this time), practical clothes in-terspersed with such things as seetury music hall and contemporary sports clothes. Tiered skirts in every length. A big, merry potpourri of fash-ion, emphasizing the fantasy and the fun. No wonder the poor man was exhausted.

The Saint Laurent collection was a standout, but not by default. There were other good things going on, Valentino, for instance. He didn't show any mini clothes, but that wasn't wby his collection was so appealing. He devised what must be the attractive opening act to Paris.

Clad Entirely in White

His entire crew of models, male and female, made their debut on a rising stage, like an orchestra. They were grinning and swaying to Latin American music. They were clad entirely in white: off-sboulder blouses, tiered skirts, ruffled petticoats, apronsthings like that. They were supposed to represent Brazil, but they looked like a clean-cut bunch of kids from

Later, they changed their clotheswarm browns, bright greens, blue and purple bad their scenes, then back to white again—while they danced to the fado beat. And at the end an ovation for the Rome designer who bas taken andience could get there.

True to his threats, Kenzo showed virtually everything short. "He's really socking away at the micro-mini," some-body muttered. He's also hedging a bit, since a number of the dresses were hiked up and bloused over a hip belt to make them look micro. Some of them were really below the knees.

Gold Touches

The serious couture houses are trying desperately to find the ready-towear beat. Christian Dior managed quite nicely. Marc Bohan threw in some gold touches-a gold lamé sash here, some lurex tank tops there. He showed strapless dresses for sunning or dancing, wide necklines that fell off the shoulder and a smattering of short clothes, including Bermuda shorts and cotton skirts exactly the same abovethe-knee length, Both had straps at the sides to adjust the waistline, a useful idea that looked attractive, too,

It's a change from the social types and actresses at the couture shows. and an indication of how important retailers across the Atlantic consider the ready-to-wear shows here.

Givenchy, who showed his collection in his couture salon instead of a large hall or theater, turned the place into a rain forest to suggest the proper resort atmosphere for summer clothes. He had a single-lined dress in crinkled cotton, and a lot of bare midriff styles for evening. The tops sort of wrap around and tie. His strapless dresses had separate sleeves, like bridesmaids mitts. # Ann Buckley Forsakes Privacy to Campaign for Husband and His Philosop

Arn Buckley is a very private person Who has gone public.

She has, for the sake of her husband, given up a degree of the anonymity she cherishes, although she won't deny that a little of that gift of privacy is selfish. She wants her husband in public life because he mirrors her philosophy, and most of all, because sha considers him an honest man.

"We very much want to win," she says, her blue eyes looking directly at the person to whom she is talking. To assist, if not insure, his victory, sife campaigns three days a week on her own, in addition to making appearances with her hushand. She attends coffees that turn into lunches and teas and sometimes dinners. She shakes hands and smiles, and through the thin, rather ascetic face, a political being emerges. The new being is somewhat of a aurprise to the old one, who was a quiet, self-contained dehutante named Ann Cooley before she was a quiat, self-contained suburban housewife.

"The little hit of campaigning I did last time left e good feeling," she said. "I'm not as frightened now. I'm more accustomed to the life and I'm freer now that the children have grown.

and I've enjoyed it."

Mrs. Buckley's conception of her role has changed little in her 23 years of marriage. Her duties have altered, particularly in the six years since James Buckley was elected a Senator from New York, but the philosophy has remained constant.

"I perceive my role to be myself," she said firmly. "My role is also to support my husband because I like to

Although she occasionally volunteers for such chores as telephoning, she believes that because the state is so large, her main area of helpfulness is meeting with voters her husband may have

She does not advise him on positions because "although be does not heve a closed mind, he knows very clearly what he thinks." She does, however, occasionally suggest e change of word or phrase in a speech ("but I don't

"The Buckleys agree on most things, she said, "but I bonestly couldn't tell yon what we don't agree on."

Abortion is summed up in two words - morally wrong," said Mrs. Buckley,

Birth control-"that's a harder one,"

"I really feel it's wrong, but I know many who do not," said Mrs. Buckley "I don't feel it's of the same magnitude as abortion in the scale of right or wrong. Myself, I wouldn't use it, but I know many who do, and I'm not to nudge them." --

She is willing to discuss day care but adds, hastily, that she is not "totally informed."

Views on Day Care

"There must be some day care," she said. "Bur I think that, if at all possible children should be cared for in a hanse by a person to whom they can relate, rather than by a group of people. Untilchildren are older, or in school, I don't think a mother should rush out to work, if she can avoid it .... or she shouldn't have the child."

Did not the last comment relate to abortion or hirth control? A small, thoughtful smile emerged with no accompanying words ...

The mother of six—Peter, 22 years old; Jay, 21; Priscilla, 20; William F. 18; David, 16, and Andrew 13 and mistress of three homes, a fieldstone house in Sharon, Conn., a house near Spring Valley in Washington and a Sutton Place apartment, Mrs. Buckley, at 48, is facing a problem shared by many women.

"The two younger boys are still in school in Washington, but I've thought for years what I would do after the kids went away, and I'm distressed that I don't know," she said. "I don't think that an identity as a husband's wife is enough. It's fine to play house and mother, but when they go, then what?"

The most appealing choices of the moment are activities connected with religion, children or music, "but I haven't found anything yet," she said.

Although she worked as a secretary after ber graduation from Manhattanville College of the Sacred I before her marriage (she wa tary with the Central li Agency in Washington when her husband), Mrs. Buckle sidering volunteer work some reservations.

Seeking Lost Elegance With Crocheting as Art

Crocheting today is far from heing all afghans and beby hooties. In the last decade a small number of craftsmen have chosen this technique as a medium of esthetic expression.

Much of what is being done is in the funk vein, But Mona Costa, a young, self-taught crochet artist who started as e painter, uses her cro-cheting as a kind of departure into lost elegance. There are some mad, crocheted creatures and a whimsical landscape or two in the one-person show she is now having at the Cordy Gallery. But it is in the sensuous and elahorate abstract hangings, and in some of the little jewel cases and reticules, that one best gets a sense of the opulence and intricate patterning that characterize her most interesting work.

The flat hangings, many almost shield-shaped, could be studies for fantastical chasubles. Using a variety of yarns, from wool and linen to silk, ribbons and metallic threads, she creates a complex interweaving of curved lines, and embellishes the pieces with objects from some old treasure box antique lace and fringe; hits of epaulettes; silk rosettes; metal heads; feathers; and round mirror insets.

Her work, priced from $50 to $1,800, can he seen at the Cordy, 324 East 73d Street, through Nov. 6.

Kilims, those flat-weave rugs of bold color and geometric design, are becoming almost as well-known today as the more traditional pile Orientals. But tha kind most people know best are the rugs woven hy nomadic tribes of Central Asia, or the kilims of North Africa.

What is not as well known is that Poland has for centuries had a tradition of weaving tapestry-style rugs. Tha Polish kilims were, and to some degree still are, a peasant art, seeo most often hanging on the walls of a simple cottage where they provided visual warmth and kept out drafts. At the same time, however, much more elahorate kilims, usually of a floral nature, covered the floors of aristocratic residences.

63 East 57th Street, is now having an exhibition of the kilims of Maria Ja-nowska, a top designer of tapestry rugs in ber native country, who will be demonstrating her technique each day. Her work seems to combine all the Po-lish design traditions, from charming folk figures and peasant motifs to bold abstractions, ranging over a broad color spectrum. The rugs, from area to room size and priced from $120 to $900, can be seen through Saturday.

Elizabeth Moynihan, controversial figure in husband's campaign, chats with workers

She admits to being a cooduit to the exteot that "I make sure what goes out goes through Pat." She also admits to trimming his schedule because "you can't be in the Bronx at IO o'clock and in Brooklyn at 10:30" and "you can't spend every last minute shaking hands and still respood to the issues.' Which explains why Mrs. Moynihan is doing some heavy hand-shaking her-self in these final days of senatorial campaign, stumping up and down the state urging supporters to work for the "dead broke" Moyniban campaign to counter the "Buckley media hlitz."

Not that she feels at home on the political platform. No, after working in eight campaigns, she says she still prefers to be "in the back of the room counting heads or something." She was counting votes at headquarters when, on the morniog after his close primary race, Mr. Moynihan scampered onto the platform to give a victory speechtheir daughter Maura, 19 years old, on one side, their younger soo, John, 16, on the other—and grinned and called out across the crowd: "Hey, I had a wife when I came into this campaign. Mrs. Moynihan grinned, too, as she recalled the sceoe. "I don't choose to be a public person," she insisted. "You know, the more public Pat has become the more adamantly private I have felt.

It's better that way, if we're going to have any kind of normal life." Still, it may not be every family's notion of normalcy. Mr. Moyniban's far-flung careers—from professor to presidential adviser to ambassador—have resulted in 16 family moves.

"But Pat has nothing to do with the moves," Mrs. Moynihan said, waving her haod as though at a mosquito. "I doo't like him around when I'm unpacking because it always takes twice as loog. So wheo we move I give him a little card and I say, In two days you come to this address.' He does what he's told."

The address the Moynihans keep returning to, their "home base," is the upstate dairy farm they hought 14 years ago. They consider the "white elephant at Harvard," where Mr. Moynihan teaches, their second home. It was there that Mrs. Moynihan stayed wheo her hushand returned to Wash-

"I didn't want to go to Washington and I didn't want him to go," she said. There was no evidence that Nixon would be receptive to his ideas on poverty and race. I thought be'd be chopped up and sent home on his shield, which he was."

The Nixon days were one of the few subjects to make Mrs. Moynihan visibly angry during a long and rambling interview.

"The black thing hits me very hard," she cooceded, referring to the Moynihan memo to Mr. Nixon suggesting benign neglect" of racial rhetoric. The suggestion was widely interpreted by blacks as counseling "neglect" of black

Mention of abortion also angered
Mrs. Moynihan. The Moynihans, who are Roman Catholics, do oot condone abortioo. Nor do they condone raising the issue in a political campaign. Nevertheless, it has become one since Senator Buckley, also a Roman Cath-olic, favors a Constitutional ameod-ment that would return control over abortion to the states. Mr. Moynihan says he would not favor an amend-

His wife appeared determined to avoid eveo using the term "abortion,"

"I think it's terrible that anyone would try to make it a political issue," she said. "You're going to polarize people. You're not going to help the problem, you're going to make it worse by discussing it in an election."

If Mrs. Moynihan's views seem to parallel those of her bushand, so indeed does her background. Both are from humble Irish families—Hell's Kitchen in his case, the outskirts of Boston in hers. Both were raised virtually without fathers, went to work at an early age, worked their way through college and came together in Democratic politics. "It is odd," Mrs. Moynihan said, "Pat and I end up without role models.

With that, she began to laugh again about life Moynihan-style. She laughed about the time the temperature in New Delhi was 110 degrees and they moved the badmintoo court into the elegant emhassy reception hall; laughed about the black-tie dinner during which the beans in her cassoulet went sour, as did her reputation as a Washington hostess; laughed about the life-sized papier mache dummy that their artists on, Tim, now 20, made for the chief United States delegate to the United Nations when Mr. Moynihan held the

We Had to Have a Butler'

This State Department fellow kept telling me we had to have a butler to answer the door and the phone and I kept telling him we couldn't afford one," she recalled. "Finally, I said to Tim. Later, at a full-dress ambassadorial do, the State Department man met the hutler. "He didn't know whether to throw me or the butler out the window," Mrs. Moynihao said. It was very thank I was very funny. I mean, very funny."

Mrs. Moynthan does seem to enjoy a joke. But she was not joking when she said of Mr. Moynthan's only other try for elective office, his 1965 primary race for City Council Presideos "The only thing worse than losing that campaign would have been winning it."
"No." she said, "I don't think he'd." have liked the Council joh." He would, of course, like the Senate job, she added, "and he'd be an absolutely great Senator."

Confronted with a store full of stereo systems, a line-up of washing machines or a showroom full of cars, today's consumer may feel like a calld who has lost his mother's shopping list on the way to the corner grocery.

Whick of the many chinees, including the one so highly touted by a sales person, should you buy? Which is most dependable and most capable of doing the basic job, be it to reproduce sound or wash clothes?

Most people respond to this problem by shopping around, by going to a few stores or dealers and listening to the sales pitches. In the end, their buying decision is often as much a function of impulse as carefully considered rea-

A Visit to Showroom

The first thing to do is visit a store or showroom well-stocked with different brands. The purpose of this visit is to get some feel for what is on the markt and at what price, and to begin to determine what features are desired. Listen to the sales clerk, jot down some prices and model names and numbers.

New Shops, Uptown and Downtown, Cater to Those Who Like to Eat Well

By MIMI SHERATON

To lovers of good food, the arrival oo the local scene of even one shop offering original and delectable specialties would be considered welcome news. But to have two such newcomers in town is cause for a full-scale celebration, a time to eat and rejoice. About five years ago, Christi Finch. and Eileen Weinberg met and discovared they shared a passion for cooking. On that basis, they began a catering working day, and that grew into an unquabilied success, simply by word of mouth. When they finally decided to give their full time to cooking, they ecided to call their shop Word of

The small, hright, pleasant shop, in operation for just one month, is so thuck full of irresistible morsels, so fragrant with the siren scents of the spoking they do on their hig Garland range in the open kitchen, that custom-ers instinctively begin to want to eat something as soon as they enter.

They pick up some of the huttery crisp rugelach pastries filled with auts, cinnamon and sugar, or a chewy brownie studded with walnuts, or a flaky croissant, in a desperate attempt to forestall starvation.

Stuffed Grapevine Leaves

Taking turns at the stove, each to produce her own specialties, Miss Weinberg, and Miss Finch specialize in cooked appetizers, soups and main courses, international in scope, hut most identifiably Mediterranean. I can't remember ever having better stuffed grapevine leaves, glossed with lemon and filled with cinnamoo-sceoted rice pilaf ($2.25 a half-pound).

There is a hearty, coarse, garlic- and brandy-flavored pate de campagne, once slightly undersalted, the next time sheer perfection ($2.25 a quarterpound), and cut-up chunks of firm white scallops dressed in a mustardy rémoulade sauce ($3.20 per half-pound). The jewel-like assorment of salads includes carrots and pink beans à la grecoue, crunchy string beans vinai-grette, gentle ratatouille a bit bland in flavor but easily re-seasoned at home, and a ziti salad with mayonnaise, soothing with sliced ham or turkey though not quite in keeping with the more sophisticated assortment.

Only One Flaw

There is a really gorgeous chicken salad ($2.75 a half-pound), too, flecked with tiny slivers of celery and tossed in dill mayonnaise with nutrneats. The only flaw to my taste were the raisins. easily picked out but somewhat out of character; if the salad is ordered in advance, they can be left out.

Creamy fresh mushroom and barley soup was delicious and other daily soups include split pea and ham, and hlack bean. ($2 a pint). Mild lean pink ham baked with an apricot glaze is sold sliced ($3.30 per half-pound) and there are daily entree specials such as beef carbonneds, sliced fills of heaf. beef carbonnade, sliced fillet of beef, and a really marvelous chicken curry with currants and raisins counterwith currants and raisins counter-pointing the cayenne pepper bite in the homemade curry powder. The pow-der, by the way, is also sold here for home use, as is cous-cous grain that would be perfect with the curry, which is more Mcroccan in inspiration than Indian, although it contains no vege-

A Seasonal Specialty

Among the several types of mousses, the cloudlike pumpkin, well-perfumed with allspice, nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves is especially suited to the season. ($1.60 per portion.) The only specialty not up to par was the honey-nut torte, a thin golden cake made oot with honey but doused with a thin sugar syrup in the manner of a savarin, making the cake itself much too soggy for

The hig jars of brandied fruits put up in summer will soon be ready to be sold and served over holiday puddings or ice cream and a few gifts such as baskets, potholders, jams, biscuits and the like, will be added to as time goes on.

Among the many cheeses, try the extraordinary gaperon, an earthy specialty of the Auvergne, cured with garlic and hlack peppercorns and not for the fainthearted. . Word of Mouth also does special-order cooking for parties, and will make any of its mousses in customers' serving bowis. The shop, at 147 East 72d Street, is open seven days a week. The phone number is 734-9483.

In another vein entirely, the Red Herring, opened only two weeks ago, is a tidy, sparkling white shop that cele-brates berring, in all its infinite variety. The Swedish-born proprietor, Paul Sandblom, is still expanding his array, but he is already well on the way to heving all of the basics of a true Scan-dinavian herring table, usually includ-ing 25 to 30 varieties at its most com-

Gravlaks, the delicate dill-cured sal-mon, is always on hand, and is as moist and silken as it should be. The price ranges from $2.25 to $2.60 a quarterpound, depending on wholesale prices. True herring connoisseurs will appreciate the more esoteric gravad mackerel ($1.25 per quarter-pound), tha silver and sapphire skinned fish filets that become meltingly tender in their sugar, salt and dill marinade.

Salt-cured salmon, really a sort of homemade lox, is made on the premises and has a bracing saline edge to its flavor and a satiny sheen when sliced paper-thin. Whole, snow white schmaltz fillets, pickled in the Swedish style with spiced vioegar and minced onion fairly cry out for accompaniments of holled new potatoes, fresh sour cream and minced chives. The French smoked her-ring fillets marinated in thyme-scented olive oil and gilded with grated carrots, need no further garnishing. Both types are $1.10 each.

Two gentle yet pungent herring alads — the ruby-red Danish made with apples, beets and veal or tongue, and the rosier Swedish salad dressed with a lightly whipped sweet cream— are perfect as appetizers or as part of a larger smorgasbord, each $1.49 per quarter-pound.

Tangy mustard dill sauce, lemony homemade mayonnaise, and an herbaccous sauce verte, meant to be served with the pale pink salmon mousse, are other house specialties.

For Doctors' Wives, Clouds But No Silver Linings

LOS ANGELES—To many women, marrying a physician means financial security and social prestige. To others, however, it means a short, unhappy marriage that ends in divorce.

"Everyone thinks that doctors' wives have it made," said Roberta Weintraub, the wife of an Encino, Calif., physician.

"They look at your beautiful home and lovely car and think that your only problem in life is deciding whether to play tennis twice or three times a week. They don't realize that marriage to a physician is not all glamour and excitement. Doctors' wives often are lonely because their husbaods have

"Divorce is becoming increasingly common among physicians." said Dr. Edward Stainbrook, a psychiatrist and chairman of the department of human behavior at the department of Southam

While no one, including the Census

A lack of dating experience may contribute to the high divorce rate.

"Doctors tend to marry the first womeo they date." said Dr. William Skilbeck, a clinical psychologist at the University of California at Los Angeles. "As undergraduates, they are too husy studying and worrying about getting accepted to medical school to get to know many women the way their classknow many women the way their class-mates do.

"By the time they reach medical school, they regret never having had a social life and try to make up for it by getting married in record time. They often marry women totally wrong for them because they doo't know themselves very well."

Once they finish their training it is often even harder for physicians to meet women with whom they have common interests because they are so busy establishing a practice.

Dr. William Nolen, a Litchfield, Minn., surgeon and author, believes that single women or their mothers often pursue eligible doctors because "they want a son-in-law who earns lots of money." (The average office-based physician earns $60,000 a year according to a recent survey in Medical Eco-

"Although women's liberation has halped somewhat, there are still many women who want to marry doctors be-cause on the surface, marriage to a physician looks like a soft, easy life," Dr. Nolen said. "It rarely is because doctors' wives have to assume most of the responsibilities for caring for the children and the house because the doctor is too busy taking care of his

"Doctors' wives have to put up with loneliness, adjustment to irregular hours, the doctor being home too little, and the telephone ringing constantly. Many women say they married for companionship and areo't getting it, so and residents have riseo coosiderably in the last 10 years, many doctors still find themselves indebted to their wivas for their education. This is apt to cause marital discord if the wife feels that she sacrificed her own career to support her husband's crudiac port her husband's studies.

A typical example is that of Ann, a 44-year-old mother of two who dropped out of college and joined the secretarial pool at the hospital where her husband did his training. After he finished his resideocy in heart surgery, he divorced her to marry a young

"The reason he gave for the divorce was that we were no longer intellectually compatible," said Ann sadly. "I resent that because I could have been the person he and I hoth wanted if only I could have finished art school." Leslie, a slim brunette in her early 30's, separated from her doctor-hus-

hand for different reasons. "I got tired of being alone," she said. 'He was always too busy at the hospital to devote any time to me or our son. I had a Mercedes and a house in Bel Air but I didn't have love and affection. My child felt as though he were an orphao because his father was always too busy to take him to football games or Cuh Scouts. I'm single auw but I'm less lonely."

Ann also found marriage to a physi-

"Doctors are difficult people to live with because nobody ever says oo to them," she explained "They are used to having their way at the hospital and they expect their wives to jump to their commands the way patients and nurses do. The problems of a doctor's wife always seem trivial to the doctor."

More doctors may be amenable to divorce these days because their incomes enable them to support two households without sacrificing a middle-class way of life. A salesman who earns $15,000 a year may be unhappy, but he cannot afford to divorce his wife as readily as can a neurosurgeon who earns $100,000 a year.

they have two children and are very interested in sports and politics.

"Marrying a doctor is a little like being First Lady," said Mrs. Weintraub, who was employed by the Democratic Party in New York City before her marriage and now works for a California legislator. "People alwaya think of you as Mrs. Doctor instead of a person who as Mrs. Doctor instead of a person who

"It is very difficult to establish a career when you are a wife of a doctor because employers refuse to take you seriously. They cannot imagine why you would want to work when you are married to someone who earns so much mooey."

Dr. Weintraub added, "One of the most promising trends I see is that more and more doctors' wives are going to graduate school, starting busi-oesses, finding the fulfillment and the prestige that doctors take for granted in their work."

Tumble as Supplies Rise

New York Food Prices

The greatest overall food price decline in the past six months was reported here yesterday by Consumer Affairs Commissioner Elinor Guggen-

As a result, she said the cost of feeding a New York City family of four last week dropped 96 cents from the previous week. And at $70.51, she noted, it was 2.2 percent below the market basket cost a year ago when it was $72.12.

"We are very pleased to be able to report that abundant supplies of grain, sugar and pork caused the greatest overall food price decline we've seen in the past six months," she declared.

Mrs. Guggenheimer added that the reduction in wholesale prices was finally being reflected on the retail level and that "we are hoping that this trend will continue."

The Commissioner's reference to abundant supplies was backed up by the United States Department of Agri-

In its monthly preview of food prices, entitled Food Marketing Alert, the supply situation for November for nearly all items was reported as "plentiful," department terminology for "more than enough for requirements."

Among the items in plentiful supply, and expected to be in seasonal demand in November, the department said, were turkeys, potatoes, sweet potatoes and onions, as well as cranberries. Cranberry production, it said, is forecast at 9 percent above the 1975 crop and the second largest crop on record.

Lipton introduces a soup so hearly you can build a meal on it.

Locally, the price of a five-pound bag of flour dropped 4 cents to 96 cents, and this, along with the current lower sugar prices ($1.26 for five pounds), caused the price of cookies to go down from 89 to 84 cents for a 15-ounce

And rising pork production resulted in a 22-cent drop in the price of pork chops, down to $1.70 a pound.

Frozen Fish Prices Rise

But on the other side of the ledger, a special survey found that the local cost of frozen foods had increased in the last six months. The greatest price hike was in the cost of frozen fish. which was due to a reduction in fresh fish_supplies.

A one-pound package of frozen flounder, for instance, increased by 6.3 percent during the period and now costs $1.88 as against $1.76 six months

The only three items in the Federal survey not reported in plentiful supply were pork and eggs, reported in adequate (enough to meet needs) supply, and pecans, which were called light, or not enough for normal needs.

Like It or Not, Bordeaux Puts Up With Change

The state of the s

BORDEAUX, France, Oct. 22-Change comes very slowly to this dignified old city. True, there now are motels on the outskirts end even a plasticlooking Frantel Hotel in a redeveloped area oear the center of town.

But the wine industry, the city's pride and burden since the Middle Ages, still moves with the speed of the oxen that were still used in the vineyards just a few years ago.

There have been changes though, all" of them prompted by the traumatic economic blows that laid the busioess low in 1973 and 1974 and from which it still is struggliog to recover.

Wine Sold at the Chateau

Almost two decades ago. Alexis Li-chine sbocked the staid Bordelais when he erected a sign on the main wine routa through the Médoc. It was not a gaudy sign; it merely pointed the way to Chateau Lascombes, which ha and some other people then owoed. In the Médoc, one simply did not adver-

Now, Mr. Lichine has several signs that not only direct the curious to his Chateau Prieuré-Licbine, but also make counting the British, the Germans and even some French."

True to the St. Emilion reputation for hospitality, tourists have always been more pleotiful there than in the Médoc or Graves, but they have become so oumerous that there is talk of creating a full-time tourist office.

The increase in visitors has created a new problem for the growers providing wine for tastings. "We simply cannot provide tastings of Chateau Haut-Brion for every busload of visitors," said John Delmas, the manager of Chateau Haut-Brion. "It is simply far too expensive." Lesser chateaus and the shippers in Bordeaux, many of whom are still overstocked, do not have this problem, but the famoos wines are the ones the visitors want to sample.

The tourist influx has certainly helped the sale of Bordeaux wices in the United States, but what the Bor-deaux merchants refer to irreverently "dumping" by American importers has belped even more. Stuck with huge inventories and a public turned off by huge prices, big American im-porters have been cutting their losses and selling famous wines cheap. So

Mr. Cottin contends that a special financing arrangement brings the 1975 Latour price up to 50,000. Latour did not sell in 1973. Still the Bordelais are grateful for small favors, and wine is selling, in part because they are working hard to sell it. A small group of five or six chateaus including Fourcas-Dupré in Listrac, bave come together informally to help each other. One of the owners is always on the road, selling the wices of the entire group.

Other owners bave taken to direct mail. Alain Querre, the owner of Chateau Monbousquet in St. Emilion, places advertisements in several Freoch maga-few years, abetted by the wine scan-dal that tarnished the came of the whole region, coded, for the foreseeable, future, the power of the Bordeaux shippers. Once they floanced the growers. Now, most growers must find their own capital.

Buoyed by a booming Belgian mar-ket and large sales of inexpensive wine Germany, the Bordelais are cau-

Mr. Querre put it differ , answer for Bordeaux is h he said.

Almost two decades ago, Alexis Lichine shocked the staid Bordelais, when he erected a sign pointing to the Chateau Lascombes. In the Médoc, one simply did not advertise.

It clear that his wine can be bought there. While few of the staid Médocains heve gone that far yet, signs announcing the whereabouts of the famous chateaus are popping up all over the place.

And not a few of the managers are ready and willing to part with a few bottles at a proper price. (The proper price, by the way, is no bargain. In fact, most Bordeaux prices are higher than they are in New York—even at the chateaus. An American army officer stationed in Germany reported paying $25 for a bottle of the 1970 Chateau Mouton-Rothschild while viaiting the chateau recently. Checking later, he found that the price in New York was $24.75.)

There are more tourists in Bordeaux these days and the wice people are hoping to lure more, and this is a considerable change from past policy.

The wide-windowed tour buses, filled with plump, middle-aged Americans, are more and more a familiar sight in the various wine districts of the Bordeaux regioo and, for the first time, the growers and merchants are beginning to work out plans to make touring more interesting.

"We have a least one group a week from the States," said Comte Leo de Malet Roquefort, the owner of Chateau la Gafflière in St. Emillon, "not

One Bordeaux salesman told of traveling to the Chanoel Islands to sell some wine. "They laughed at me," he said. "They could buy the same wines from Loodon at 30 percent

The Clock Is Ticking

. The Bordeaux wice people are happy to see a renewed interest in their wines in the United States, but they know the clock is ticking. One day the stocks of 1970's, 1971's, 1972's, 1973's and 1974's will be gone and so will be bargain prices.

"What happened in 1973 could happen all over again when the 1975's come on the market," said Philippe Cottin, manager of Chateau Mouton-Rothschild. "All our costs have gone up and French inflation Is still fierce."

"The prices the consumer has been "The prices the consumer has been paying in the States do not reflect the market. He is in for a shock when

The most decorated French wine in history.

Château de La Chaize. Produced and bottled at the famed 300vear-old Château de La Chaize, this Beaujolais Brouilly has captured more gold medals in a single vintage than any wine in French history. One taste explains all.

Château de La Chaize

We went through 400 chateaux to find the best value in Haut-Medoc.

The wine experts of C&E trudge the vineyards of France to seek out the undiscovered wines.

Those superb, squirreled-away vintages that baven't yet achieved the heady publicity (and price tag) of the gushedabout wines. In Haut-Médoc, our long searched ended at Château Larose-Trintaudon. Here was a wine perhaps on the verge of classic proportions. A soft, seductive red wine that would hold its own in the most formidable of cellars.

Château Larose-Trintaudon. Discovered and imported by C&E. At about $4 a bottle, easily the best value in the whole Haut-Médoc.

Where the Dead Live On

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

Moving to final rest at 65 miles an hour, the last remains are trundledeastward from the city along the Long Island Expressway to Exit 49, where the cortege's headlights beam southward through the fall sunshine to Pinelawn, the great suburban resting place for the urban dead.

The cemeteries growing there seem as secure, neat and organized as suburban subdivisions. First comes the Na-tional Cemetery for war dead and vet-erans where small, uniform headstones are set in hypnotic ranks and files, and where newcomers must first be re-ported to something called the Interment Control Center.

Next door, there is the modernistic memorial park where death is not so much proud as pruned — where the earth appears to he kept virtually seamless and mortality is understated on ground-level plaques. Then follows the religious cemeteries, plains of stonework with a few touches of individuality, but with a general silhouette of death as rectangle.

A visitor sees that, however democratic and polite the newer resting places, there never has been a place for stylish ever-aftering to match faces, there never has been a place for stylish ever-aftering to match Green-Wood Cemetery in Brooklyn, the city's first rural cemetery, designed 125 years ago when Manhattan life first seemed encroaching and grief seemed more a public event.

It has turned out better than some other planned neighborhoods. Great shade trees that creak in the autumn wind anchor the hills of the cemetery's 500 acres. Waterfront life stretches out below, and all about stands a village of the dead inside and under Gothic, neo-classic and eclectic structures in many ways as strange as life itself.

It is still painful to hear of the death of Charlotte Canda who died in 1845 on the eve of her 17th hirthday when her father left the horse and carriage momentarily unattended and she was carried off, fatally careening.

She stands in stone, as a saint on an altar, her image dressed in her hirthday-hall gown, in an elaborate setting she designed with the thought it was for an aunt, a monument her father decorated with 17 rosebuds and other numerical reminders of Charlotte.

All these years later it is permissible an these years after it is permissione to smile the smile of a Victoriana buff appreciating the towering, almost ranting stooework and the sense of portrayal survivors had in the 19th Century. So smiles Gary Reynolds, an art curator at the Brooklyn Museum, who leves the corrector. who loves the cemetery.

"They reveled in death back then," he says, moving through lanes of weather-scarred allegory—the broken roses, draped urns, reaped wheat, frayed nautical lines, inverted torches that rise up like chords from a pipe organ. 'They loved to mourn, and funerals were events as big as hirths."

The point is made in limestone at the century-old grave of Jane Griffith, who is depicted at the door of her town house saying goodbye to her husband a she heads for work.

The detail includes a horse-drawn trolley near the house; she was killed on such a routine day by such a vehicle. The mooument has told the deadly ending of her story, the same way a sinking ship is depicted at the grave of the Brown family which lost six members in a loog-ago drowning. Green-Wood was conceived as a prestigious place to rest, and the wealthy who bought tracts there sometimes picked out their monuments while still in bloom, choosing a favored Continental stonework, perhaps, while making their vacation grand tour. Some even put things in place during life and used the setting for picnics with family and friends.

Mr. Reynolds thought the most elegant of these to be the expansive setting of William Niblo, who ran an entertainment palace, Niblo's Gardens, at Broadway and Prince Street. His gravesite, with a sweeping stone wall and staircase, vases, the figure of Memory sighing nearby and a great mausoleum covered by ivy, still looks like a good place to throw a party.

Some newer graves at the cemetery are Pinelawn plain and seem truly grieving with red lamps, "eternal" as long as there is electricity, sticking from the ground not too far from the great stone resting place of John Mackay, the early communications scion, whose direction to supply heat to the mausoleum has been carried out for decades, according to Mr. Reynolds. Name droppers can have a busy day in Green-Wood, ranging from Horace Greeley to Joey Gallo. Boss Tweed— William M. on his markr—has an im-pressive family plot under perpetual care, and his own stone is darkly oversized, as if designed by Thomas Nast.

Like all good cemeteries, Green-Wood stirs fresh questions about life. Why did Isaac H. Brown leave us 94 years ago with a towering statue of Pythagoras marking his remains? And exactly what was intended by the pyramid scene at the remains of Van-Ness Parsons, where a sphinx and a Christian figure seem to watch each

The shaping of final words are as interesting as the carvings. William Waring's stone expresses Biblical hope:

Waring's stone expresses Biblical fope:
"I am the Resurrection..." But the neighboring stone of Frederick Waring seems more pleasantly humble in its perspective: "I would not live alway
I ask not to stay."
Fair enough, but in his sense of how quickly each of us flickers, Frederick Waring made sure he had a handsome place in Green-Wood for his remains. A hundred and ten years ago in this newspaper, a column similar to in this newspaper, a column similar to this told of some of the strivings of that day and ranked the cemetery thusly: "It is the ambition of the New Yorker to live on Fifth Avenue, to take his airings in the [Central] Park, and to sleep with his fatners in Green-Wood."

Style-minded New Yorkers have since found other places for living and for airing themselves, and in these circles death is, as elsewhere, a drag. But should the need arise to approach the subject obliquely, through the darkly pleasing glass left behind by others, there stands Green-Wood.

East and West were vulnerable. The bidding: North West 20 Pass Pass

West led the heart three.

to win the national final in Salt Lake City in August.

South's two-heart bid when one club was passed around to him showed a good hand with game prospects—there would be no reason to employ a weak jump overcall in the balancing seat. North accordingly raised to game, and Eisenberg as West made a shrewd lead of the heart three. Resisting the inclination to lead the singleton diemond paid a substantial dividend.

The declarer won the first trick with The declarer won the first trick with the trump king and returned a trump. Eisenberg won with the ace and after considerable thought led a club, knocking out dummy's ace. South could now have succeeded by drawing the missing trump and taking a diamond finesse, but he had no clue to the location of the diamond king.

Instead the declarer not unreason-

Instead the declarer not unreasonably played West for that significant card by taking the ace and leading a diamond toward dummy. He was not pleased when West discarded. Kantar in the East position captured the diemond jack with the king and led the spade jack. West won and continued the suit for South to ruff. The declarer tried leading the club ten and would have made his contract against a sleepy defender. But Eisenberg covered with the queen, forcing the dummy to ruff, and the heart nine was established as the setting trick, In the replay, West made the more obvious lead of the singleton diamond and South had no trouble in making 10 tricks after winning the first trick in the dummy with the jack. He played trumps, and lost one spade trick, one heart trick and one club trick since East had no entry to give his partner

Mr. Koning remarks that, because all the papers are confined to Government propaganda, there is a "new sileoce" in Cairo, a tacit refusal to talk seriously about Egypt. He sees the country as one in which the king was toppled in true revolutionary fashion and the people, again faithful to revolutionary tradition, never took over. The bureaucracy now in power has decreed that there are to be "no development plans at the expense of the present generation." Outside the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, the author had this confirmed Men were making bricks in the same Men were making bricks in the same way as on the hieroglyphs inside.

A 'High' at the Pyramids

The Nile Hilton has a "Taverne Bar," labeled "La Belle Epoque, the Gay Nineties." The Meridien, a modern French hotel, has so many different kinds of apparatus at work to counter-act the environment that when you sit on the terrace to gaze at the Nile, "you get the sound effects of being on a motor boat." Not everything Egyptian has been vitiated however: lo a mosque, Mr. Koning found not "the quiet of our churches, where you may feel you are on the sidelines of life...;" but "the quiet of some inner chamber of decision." At the pyramids, in spite of all the ballyboo that surrounds them, he experienced what he could only describe as a "high."

while "A New Yorker io Egypt" is not excessively given to moralizing, the author does leave us with this thought in regard to Egypt's previous status as a British protectorate; "What coloolalism leaves behind," he writes, "is a highly developed instluct for selfpreservation, escapism, an urge to be happy as the former masters seemed to be happy, and according to their recipe."

Issue: The Human Condition

On Aug. 12, 1974, three days after he took the eath of office, President Ford told a joint session of Congress: "As Vice President, I studied various proposals for better health care financing. I saw them coming closer together, and urged my friends in the Congress and in the Administration to sit down and sweat out a sound compromise. . . . Why don't we write -and I ask this with the greatest spirit of cooperationa good health bill on the statute books before this Congress adjourns?"

It was the first and last appeal by President Ford to-move ahead on national health insurance.

Mr. Ford's subsequent loss of interest in the matter is tharacteristic of his general view of the Government's role in shoring up the human component in the nation's resources. His record in the entire field of health, education and welfare suggests an absence of policiesunless consistency in the use of the veto can be considered a policy.

Whatever lethargic reference the Ford Administration made occasionally to the question of health care was confined almost entirely to the necessary but by itself inadequate coverage of only catastrophic illness.

That long-ago glimmer of hope for effective welfare reform presented by the Nixon Administration in its early years has long been extinguished in the Nixon and Ford Administrations.

in education, the ax was ever ready sgainst any such extension of child care and development. When Mr. Ford "with some reluctance" refrained from vetoing the omnibus higher and vocational education bill earlier this month, his attitude spoke eloquently of his lack of understanding of the real needs of higher education.

The President's objection to a more realistic increase in Basic Educational Opportunity Grants for college students from their present $1,400 limit to $1,800 speaks for itself; his opposition to a clause that would at last provide some direct institutional aid to colleges which enroll large numbers of scholarship students shows little comprehension of the campuses' plight, In the elementary and secondary schools, the Nixon-Ford reliance on revenue sharing rather than on specific aid programs has, in many localities, led to a deterioration in efforts to improve the education of the poor.

The challenges in these fundamental areas are of overriding importance, not only to the human beings involved but to the nation's economic strength as well. Even in the absence of any master plan, Jimmy Carter has responded with greater compassion and realism to these issues. His general promise of governmental reorganization would undoubtedly include - perhaps begin with-a streamlining of the unmanageable colossus of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Governor Carter is committed to the gradual increase of the Federal share in dealing with the cities' present welfare burden. He lays emphasis on maternal and child health and on preventive health care, in addition to catastrophic illness insurance. These programs would be considered as only a foundation for more comprehensive national coverage, once Federal revenues are bolstered by full employment and tax reform.

Messrs. Ford and Carter have both rightly underscored the nation's basic strength. But it is in the broad domain of health, education and welfare that such strength must be nurtured and extended to increasing numbers of Americans. It is in those areas that so directly affect the human condition that the nation's overall strength is being most seriously undermined by enclaves of festering poverty, ignorance and inequality. This is why the issues of bealth, education and welfare call not for a policy of veto and wait, but for affirmation of the kind of action indicated by the Carter program.

At Stake in Geneva

The only visible basis for hope for the conference on Rhodesia that opens tomorrow is the fact that all the white and black leaders invited by Britain have come to Geneva to participate. If their private negotiating positions were as rigid as their public postures they would hardly have bothered to make the long trip north.

Ian Smith. Prime Minister of the white minority Government that declared Rhodesia's independence from Britain eleven years ago, continues to insist that be will accept no changes in the proposals for a transition to majority rule that he accepted from Secretary of State Kissinger last month. But he has been told by both Britain and the United States that what he represents as an immutable "package" is really only a basis for negotiations.

Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, the two most important of the four black Rhodesian leaders participating say for the record that they have "completely rejected" the Kissinger plan, "about which we were not consulted." But in coming to Geneva they have in fact accepted the first two of the five points in that plan: the principle of majority rule within two years and a conference to set up an interim multiracial administration to serve until a majority Government can be established under a new Constitution.

is difficult to envision the blacks accepting two propositions which Mr. Smith insisted on adding to Mr. Kissinger's plan before he would approve it. These speciff a white chairman for a Council of State, which would be charged with writing the Constitution, and call for whites to hold the ministries of defense and law and order in the interim Cabinet. Compromises on these issues are not inconceivable if, behind the public cashonading, there is a genuine will on both sides to negotiate a peaceful evolution.

Britain and the United States obviously count heavily on Prime Minister Vorster of South Africa to keep Mr. Smith in line and on Presidents Kaunda of Zambia and Nyarcre of Tanzania to help prevent the rival black leaders from getting into sterile competition to see who caff make the most extreme demands on Rhodesia's white regime, Britain has endorsed one black demand for immediate release of hundreds of black political prisoners held without trial by Mr. Smith's Government.

Despite the pre-conference skirmishing, both London and Washington are keenly aware that the Geneva gatherifig represents the most serious attempt in many years and perhaps the last opportunity—to arrest the drift toward major racial conflict and possibly great-power infervention in southern Africa.

For such enormous stakes, both Governments presumably are ready to make extra exertions and take political risks to hring off a breakthrough at Geneva.

Pregnant Students

To save the $1.5 million a year it costs to operate the vity's five special high schools for pregnant students, a decision was taken in February to close them. Then the bureaucracy went to work.

Somebody decided that since the special schools were to shut down at the end of this term, no new students would be enrolled during the current school year. Some students were sufficiently motivated, after being turned away from the special schools, to attempt to register in the schools to which they would ordinarily have been assigned. Then came Catch-22; they weren't allowed to register there either.

Thanks to Councilwoman Carol Greitzer and the responsiveness of Chancellor Irving Anker when be finally focused on the problem, enrollment in the special schools has been reopened and the girls who would have had no place to go now have a school to attenduntil the end of this semester.

If the bureaucracies go back to operating on an as usual basis, very little thought will be given to the question again, until sometime near the beginning of the second term, when the schools will face the problem of what to do with more than 2,000 pregnant students. The Chancellor's decision ought to be viewed as the beginning of a three-month opportunity to find a solution for these girls other than closing all five of the schools now available to them.

A Tax Break for Cities

In the pasticbe of tax reform provisions just signed into law, there is one real reform that will have a substantial effect on cities. It has been Federal tax policy until now never to give a landmark an even break. The law has rewarded landmark demolition by making it tax deductible and added insult to injury by providing for accelerated depreciation on the replacement.

As a result, cities are pockmarked with parking lots and studded with high-rise mediocrities that are testimony to the astuteness of property owners who know a tax break when they see one. Occasionally a site is marked with a plaque for the superior structure that stood there, but more often the only indication of the irreparable erosion of the urban environment is in someone's tax returns.

The powerful negative impact of this kind of tax policy has finally been recognized. The rehabilitation of commercial landmark property has now been put on an equal footing with new construction. Demolition of a landmark is no longer deductible, and its replacement will not get accelerated depreciation. A rehabilitated landmark will be eligible for the same rate of write-off as a new building.

These Federal changes are a good start. At the local level, cities continue to reward with lower assessments those who tear down or neglect buildings, and to penalize with higher taxes those who improve older structures. As long as vacant land is taxed at a lower rate, sound, handsome buildings will be leveled. New York's tax incentive program for converting older structures to residential needs is a move in the right direction.

But the results of had policies are an all-too-prevalent physical reality. It has become painfully clear that tennous neighborhoods can be ravaged by tax-created parking lots and the lack of rehabilitation tools. Tax reform that encourages conservation is sound urban policy. Cities are built and destroyed as much by laws as by men.

Autumn Woodland

There are two times in the year when one can scarcely stay indoors. In the spring, when the buds are about to hurst, and now, soon after the first hard frost.

The color in the woodland hasn't really vanished, but most of it now is down out of the treetops. Walk in the woods and you walk in color, ankle-deep in crisp gold and crimson. Roadsides scuffle with it and every breeze seems full of leaves. Stand beside a clump of sumac and the leaves are so loose your own breath will bring them down. Under a red oak there are so many leaves it seems impossible there are so many still on the tree.

An open field may be a tangle of goldenrod and milkweed, brown stems and withered leaves and leaves like beaten gold, but the gray goldenrod fluff is like mist on every breath of air and the gray-green milkweed pods spill shimmering streamers down the wind. Wild grape climbs a fencerow maple seedling, the tan grape leaves with a texture like that of a paper napkin. Few grapes are left. With luck you may see the purple-stained possum that ate most of them.

At the roadside stands a tree nobody ever bothered to prune or pamper. It is a box elder, country cousin of the sugar maples, leafless now but loaded with tan tassels, keys like those on the maples but borne in bunches. It will hold those keys, and their edible little nuts, all winter, for hungry birds and small animals. It has no special autumn color, but it is as much a part of the season as the oaks or the gold and orange and crimson maples.

Foreign Policy: A Case Against Carter

To the Editor:

The most astonishing aspect of this Presidential campaign is the fact that a major political party should nominate a candidate for the Presidency whose experience and exposure in foreign policy is virtually zero. This is no reflection on Mr. Carter as a man since I have no doubt that his keen intellect is capable of absorbing rapidly the many facets of international problems. In my mind, at least, foreign affairs must take precedence over domestic policies, it is in the sphere of foreign policy that we have as a nation so often stubbed our toes. I believe that President Kennedy.

a charming capable and idealistic young man, stumbled into the Vietnam quagmire because of his relative inexperience in matters international. I am also mindful of the fact that in this century the Democrats have been a war-prone party. Indeed, it seems that peace is a luxury we have been able to afford only under Republican Presidents. Every Democratic President in this century has presided over a war, Eisenhower and Nixon between them extricated us from two of them. This suggests to me that the preservation of peace requires more than the idealism or good intentions of a Wilson or Kennedy; rather, it demands more of the tough-minded realism of a Humphrey or Nixon, which can come only through experi-

Democrats prate about the lower unemployment rate under their Administrations. What they fail to tell the people is that this has been due to the incessant wars we get into when they are in power. Wars generate their own brand of prosperity; it is much more difficult to achieve prosperity during peacetime.

'Flawed' Support for Ford

A self-styled "ex-McGovern supporter" tells us in her letter [Oct. 17] that she will vote for Ford primarily because Carter's leadership is open to serious question. She then asks us to spend the next four years "getting our communal heads together . . . if only Ford can just hold us steady." We have seen several recent examples of that steadiness on issues such as grain price supports, supersophisticated weaponry sales, the hegemony of Fastern Europe.

How valid is her argument on leadership? No candidate exists on his or her own, Ford is a product of the Republican Party, just as Hoover was in 1932. We had no trouble with that election despite our ignorance of Roosevelt's abilities, leadership or otherwise. We knew where Republicans stood on subjects like unemployment and we know where they stand

Of course we should listen to suggestions from former supporters of Democratic candidates. That they may be Republicans is an important consideration in evaluating their recommendations. In the present instance, I find our ex-McGovern supporter's thinking, if not suspect, then certainly WILLIAM MEYERS New York, Oct. 19, 1976

The Court may have jurisdiction with regard to the former. The latter is, and ought to be, the preserve of legislative bodies. Roy Meador's letter (Oct. 19) refers to the death penalty as "revenge." He misses the point - which is that something must be done to prevent the current slaughter of innocent victims of crime. Those who advocate the death penalty believe that its deterdissuade potential murderers. Do the opponents of the death penalty bave any solutions to the problem? It is very convenient to dismiss the already dead victims, with the thought that killing their murderers won't bring them back; but it is only basic common sense that if killers are not deterred, then they and others are encouraged to commit future murders.

We should stop the glib slogancering and mount an effort to protect potential victims of murder.

Revenue Sharing: The Better Plan

To the Editor:

Your Oct. 15 editorial "A Handout Is No Policy" misses the point entirely. The General Revenue Sharing bill which the President signed in Yonkers cannot be considered in a vacuum, but rather in concert with block grant programs, including tha 1974 Housing and Community Development Act, which even the Democratic chairman of the Senate Housing Subcommittee described as "landmark" legislation.

To say, as The Times did, that "the substitution of ... block grants merely gave state and local political establishments more money with which to conduct business as usual" is to ignore completely that tha whole thrust of that act is not to conduct "business as usual." Grants under this program are apportioned to communities on the basis of population, poverty and overcrowded housing, and unlike the old categorical programs, it requires cities to develop and implement both a community development plan and a housing assistance plan in order to receive such funds. These plans require cities to set forth oeeds and to state how they plan to address those needs over a three-year period. Even Mr. Carter has endorsed the Administration's block grant approach, and few mayors would disagree.

General Revenue Sharing is not a program to maintain the "keepers of the status quo," but rather to help our cities maintain their fiscal solvency while the block grant programs address their most pressing and critical local needs as determined not by Washington bureaucrats but by locally elected officials whose first-hand knowledge of those problems and priorities. I can assure you, will always exceed that of the most knowledgeable Washington bureaucrats. Furthermore, these funds enable localities to pay for police protection, transporta-tion and education without raising property taxes, which constitute the source of 85 percent of local funds. We all know that excessive taxation of property has led to abandonment and disinvestment, which are the most frequently cited symptoms of urban CARLA A. HILLS

WASHINGTON-A moderately successful grain harvest this fall may hull world leaders into a faise sense of security over the world food situation. Few realize that even this year's promising crop will do little to rebuild depleted grain reserves.

Recently available data for death rates during the food-scarce years for Bangladesh, India and several African countries underscore the urgency of rebuilding food reserves. As food prices rose, in a situation of scarcity, so too did death rates, taking a beavy toll among the poor, young and elderly.

The impact of global food scarcity on Bangladesb is particularly harsh. Like most poor countries, Bangladesh does not have good vital statistics, but the International Cholera Research Laboratory has kept meticulous birth and death records for Matlab Bazar, the largely rural district in which it is Twice during this decade food shortages bave been followed by severe nutritional stress and loss of life. Daily per-capita cereal consumption fell to near-starvation levels in 1971 because of adverse weather and the war with India. The death rate for Matlab Bazar jumped by 40 percent; accepting a Ford Foundation team's assumption that it is a representative district, an extrapolation for the entire country indicates an additional 427,000 deaths.

After two good crop years, extensive flooding caused the harvest levels to fall again. A Bangladesh representative at the 1974 World Food Conference, in Rome, implored the international community to come to his country's aid. But because additional food-relief exports would have further raised food prices in the supplier countries, the response was belated and inadequate; consequently, Matlab Bazar's death rate climbed again, this time suggesting a natioowide increase in deaths of 333,000.

Bangladesh has suffered in company. In 1972, uncommonly poor harvests in several key countries led to an absolute decline in world grain production of 3 percent. The Soviet Union imported nearly 30 million tons of grain, tying up most of the world's exportable wheat supplies. United States crop levels sank below average, and the Indian subcontinent reaped one of its poorest harvests in years.

Unable to obtain enough food from abroad, India stood hy helplessly while food consumption dropped. Poorer Indian states were the most severely affected; death rates climbed in Bihar, Orissa and Uttar Pradesh in 1972, claiming about 829,000 lives. Nationwide, the toll was far greater.

Outside Asia the sheer numbers of people caught in the often fatal food squeeze were fewer, but the plight of the bunger-stricken groups was, if anything, worse, The drought in the Sahelian zooe of Africa had fastened Its grip well before the outside world finally began to take notice in mid-1973. According to testimony before Congress, perhaps 100,000 to 250,000 lives were lost-no one will ever know

An equally grisly crisis was unfolding in the mountains of Ethiopia. There, the famine became even more serious as efforts were made to keep it a secret from the outside world. One of the most costly, life-consuming coverups in history, the Ethiopian disaster eventually claimed some 200,000 lives.

Wherever acute food shortages have occurred, their demographic effects have followed a common pattern. The countries most devastated by food scarcity were the poorest ones, and, within these, the poorest groups-landless laborers in Bangladesh, those in India's poorest states, nomads in the Sahel-have paid the highest price.

Without adequate food reserves, the ioternational community has lost the will and the wherewithal to effectively respond to crop shortfalls in individual countries. The world community, led by the United States, was able to stave off major famine during the 1950's and 1960's, most notably in India during 1966 and 1967, when the United States shipped one-fifth of its wheat crop there. Unfortunately, without adequate reserves large-scale unilateral rescue efforts of this sort are no longer possible.

Only the United States, with its tremendous production and export capacity, can take the lead in establishing an international food reserve. Led by the Department of Agriculture, we have dragged our feet during the two years since the Rome conference, often squabbling over details. The human cost of inadequate reserves has now been documented. A world without food reserves is a dangerous place for the poor.

The Hair Factor

PARIS-During the decidedly mediocre political campaign that is now winding up in the United States, practically every aspect of the candidates -their views, babits and personalities -has been discussed except the length of their hair. We know something about Jimmy Carter's suppressed libido and also something about the kind of moral nutlonk tolerated in Jerry Ford's family.

We have been told io profusion and also in some confusion about twiceborn and thrice-born religious conceptions, about Democratic batting averages and about battered Republican knees. We have heard more than the usually anticipated share of noodleheaded gaffes. But the matter of tonsure has been artfully dodged by experts of each party.

Is this silence occasioned by a bald fear of sudden exposure -- the embarrassed realization that a ticket is either too birsute or not enough? Those who have read their history hooks are clearly aware of the political implications that can on occasion be read into unfashionable tonsorial style.

The Goths, io ancient Europe, wore hair long while the Romans, who ran the show, clipped theirs. Consequently a haircut meant disqualification from the higher offices of state because the obvious inference was that a Goth who went to the barbershop was trying to pass himself off as somathing he wasn't or that he was a collabora-

During the latter part of the 19th century the Yi Dynasty in Korea prohibited men from wearing long hair knotted in the bitherto chic fashinn. The present chief of the Seoul Government, President Park Chung Hee, has banned relatively similar hairdo's (sometimes locally referred to as "hippie-style").

He warns offending males that if they violate this ban by allowing their locks to cover their ears or reach their collars, they will go to jail. Kim Seong Jin, President Park's Minister of Culture, lucidly explains: "We don't want youngsters to grow long hair: It's bad for mental and physical

The military junta which ruled Greece from 1967 to 1974 was very much down on hair, among other things. Greeks—and even young visitors from abroad-faced a choice between prisoo, deportatioo or a quick haircut.

While the hairy innuendo of Communism-anarchism was definitively abandoned a few years later-perhaps because there were so many wars in which soldiers were closely shorn so keep them free of lice-hair has revived as a political issue during the past decade or so.

For the most part, the long-haired young men and even Innger-haired young women-especially in the Westem world-have come to be associated with the general idea of protest: protest against practically anything, just so that things don't remain as stodgy as they seem to be.

Analyzing Joblessness

By Alfred J. Tella

WASHINGTON-At 7.8 percent, the unemployment rate today is almost twice as high as that of 20 years ago. Although the unemployment rate measures fairly well what it intends to measure, intervening events in the last two decades have affected the comparability of the data.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy's Council of Economic Advisers made an important decision. The period from mid-1955 to mid-1957 was considered the golden age of unemploy-ment that the country should strive to return to. In those years there was no war, hardly any inflation, and the unemployment rate was 4 percent.

Everyone seemed to agree that the advisers had done a good thing, and tha 4 percent figure stuck in the public's mind. But so many things have happened since the golden years that it's not really proper to compare the unemployment rate today with that of two decades ago.

To determine how much worse unemployment is now than then, we must put the unemployment rate back on its old track, by adjusting the rate up or down to account for those factors that cause trouble for people who like fair comparisons.

Today, there is in the labor force a higher percentage of women and young persons, who always have high unemployment rates, even in good times, because they shop around fre-quently to find the job they want. If the labor force today had the same age and sex composition as 20 years ago, the total unemployment rate would be nearly a point lower.

In the 1950's, when employment rose, memployment usually fell by as much as the rise in jobs. New jobs were taken mainly by the unemployed. Today, when employment rises, a larger percentage of the jobs are taken hy people attracted from outside the labor force. So with a smaller percentage of new jobs now going to the unemployed, the unemployment rate falls by less than it used to, even when employment growth is just as strong. The increased tendency for workers to enter the labor force when job opportunities improve has added as much as a point to the unemployment rate.

In 1972, Congress decided that mothers receiving welfare who were able to work had to register for work. The memployment rate of welfare moth- Bureau of the Census. w until next Tuesday.

ers jumped in 1972-73, even though unemployment generally was falling. The job-registration requirement probably added about 0.2 to the total unemployment rate.

In 1974, unemployment insurance was extended by 26 weeks, and previously uncovered groups became eligible. Unemployed workers could look for a job longer and still collect. Lengthened unemployment probably increased the total unemployment rate by half a point or a point.

A recent program, Supplemental Unemployment Assistance, provides benefits to unemployed workers not eligible for regular unemployment insurance. This program apparently kept some schoolteachers and others in the working force who would normally have dropped out during summers, possibly raising the annual unemployment rate by two-tenths of a point.

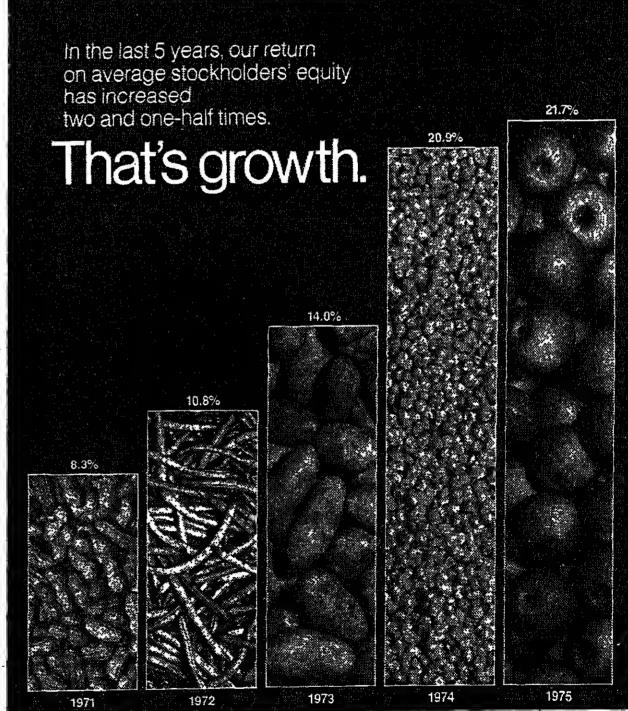

Response errors occur in the data, as when one person in a household mistakenly tells a Government interviewer that others did not look for work. If taken into account, such errors would increase the unemployment rate by about four-tenths of a

Today, there are new Government programs that create job opportunities for different groups. Two of these are the Public Service Employment and the College Work Study programs. Enrollees are counted as employed even though they are not in marketcreated jobs and many would otherwise have been unemployed. In the absence of these programs, the total unemployment rate would probably be several tenths of a point higher.

Other factors may have influenced the unemployment data, such as extension of the minimum wage (employers find it more expensive to hire teen-agers in jobs that may not be worth higher pay), but the experts haven't come np with any usable estimates to adjust the unemployment rate. And those influences we know something about are continually changing in importance.

All in all, a good guess is that the unemployment rate comparable to 20 years ego is probably 2 to 2.5 points less than currently reportedmore like 1.5 times rather than twice as high as the 4 percent rate of the golden mid-1950's.

"Jacqueline nearly perished after Picasso died in 1973," reports the the photographer David Douglas Duncan, an old friend of the late artist and his widow. "For nearly two years she languished in total seclusion; at Notre-Dame de Vie [Picasso's studiohome on the Rivieral, with monthly visits to the Chateau de Vauvenargues [the mountain estate where the art-

The woman, the bouse and the work that Picasso left behind him are the subjects of Mr. Duncan's newest book, The Silent Studio" (Norton, $12.50), his fourth photographic record of Pi-

There is, of course, the studio with its empty easel and abandoned chair. There is the table where Picasso welcomed friends "with hottered toast and boneyed tea." There is a Louis XIII sofa piled high with books devoted to bis work, two Blue Period portraits, and Jacqueline's garden bat, untouched since the day ha died. And there is Jacquelina berself, a brooding figure who sits caressing a dachshund puppy brought by friends and "stariog into the past."

Like Musical Composition

"Tve tried to compose it as a musical work, an opera or a symphooy," says Mr. Duncan of his textless book. "When you go, you don't talk during the performance, so there are no captions, 1 become your host in this house, but I want you to look at it in Picasso's

And Mr. Duncan, who astumates that he bas made some 50,000 photographs of the artist and his work, adds: "I found in doing my other books that when Picasso was in front of me, he was so strong photographically that he dominated his own environment. Now that he'a not there physically, but spiritually, I can see him more clearly as an artist. I can even see him at his work table, sitting up very straight and bandling the brush like a stylus. The photographs for "The Silent Studio," Mr. Duncan notes, were taken over 10 days in his role as official documentary photographer for the artist's beirs—Jacqueline, his children Maia, Claude, Paloma and two grand-children—and for Maurice Rheims, the court-appointed art expert appraising the value of every object in the artist's vast estate. "Jacqueline was upstairs the entire time," Mr. Duncan writes in the preface to the book. "She appeared when ber health permitted, or when she was needed argently by the experts. Every-one tried to shield Jacqueline from the obvious agony of baving professionals, court-ordered, inside ber bome cataloging everything, even the contents of Pablo's and her clothes closets. The experts have now returned to Paris.

Now it's over. She seems so relieved and exhausted." $1.1 Billion Estate

The estate, consisting of Picasso's works, two residences, two castles, and the artist's bank account, has been valued at $1.1 billion by the experts. The artist's widow, who by French law is entitled to a major share of the estate, will, according to Mr. Duncan, eventually come into several bundred million dollars. Now 50, Mrs. Picasso lives alone in the villa at Mougins with a house-keeper and Picasso's secretary, often going barefoot round the house. "There are no guards, no chauffeur," notes Mr. Duncan, "She has no materialistic desires whatever. She leads the simplest life, in devotion to his memory.

When the artist died on April 8, 1973; Mr. Duncan recalls, his widow took his body to the feudal castle they owoed at Vauvenargues, "and closed the gates there for 10 days. Picasso lay in a casket in front of the baronial fireplace, while outside meo dug his crypt in the circular garden in from of the chateau. There was no funeral.

The grave, a grassy mount sur rounded by a low rim of stone and vines, is unmarked saved for a Picasso sculpture of a primeval woman holds ing a Grecian torch, a duplicate of one that Picasso himself had earmarked at a gift to the Spanish Republic.

"Self-Effacing Role"

One of the few intimates with whom Picasso discussed art," Mrs. Picasso is described by Mr. Duncan as "the only persoo I've ever met wbo gave herself completely to another person, adopted a totally consuming, self-effacing role, She was always there-his wife, house keeper, cook. And when people like Rubinstein, Braque, Harry Truman, came to the villa, she was a miracle of bospitality and graciousoess."

Although they are not unfriendly toward one another, Mrs. Picasso and the other heirs "don't seek each other out," Mr. Duncao reports, "I think Jacqueline is determined to b final defeoder of the Picasso image her last gift to him. I think her only wish would be health and a chance to pursue whatever dreams she bas of making a Picasso museum of ber owi beritage-perhaps at Vauvenargues."

Mr. Duncan, a tall, white-haired mai who somewhat resembles the late Gary Cooper, smiles when asked if this will be his last book on Picasso. "Yes but there are these wonderful photo graphs I have of Lump, a dachshund gave to Picasso many years ago he says, and his eyes light up.

Two Elderly Men Found Dead; Police Blame Illness and Poverty

By EMANUEL PERLMUTTER

The four-room apartment at 651 West 188th Street, in Washington Heights, was littered with wina bottles and rubbish. Two elderly men lay on the living room floor, dead, it appeared, for more than a week. An elderly woman was semiconscious on the floor of her bedroom. There was no evidence of vio-

"They drank a lot, but were quiet and never bothered anybody," said Detec-tive Thomas W. McKenna, one of the police officers who found the bodies Monday night when summoned by a neighbor who had not seen the three elderly people for more than two weeks.

The officers had to enter through the fire escape of the sixth-floor apartment. There they found Robert Rowe, 65 years old: Lawrence Gaghan, 72, and Mr. Rowe's sister, Olga Donahue, a 76-year-old widow. She was taken to Jewish

Memorial Hospital for treatment of malnutrition. As the story was pieced together by the police, the deaths were the culmination of age, poverty and illness. They learned that Mr. Rowe had worked for Mr. Gaghan when the latter had a small luncheonette in the once middleclass neighborhood. Mr. Gaghan became ill and lost his business, and Mr. Rowe moved in with him in the West 188th Street apartment to take care of him. Both men began to get Supplemental Security Income.

When Mr. Rowe became ill and was no longer able to care for his friend, his sister moved in to care for both of them last summer. But she, too, became ill. A caseworker for the Social Services Department's Bureau of Protective Services came to the apartment fast Friday seking to talk to Mrs. Donahue, hut she refused to admit him.

U.S. Orders Jam Seized

The Federal Government has ordered the seizure of 500 cases of strawberry jam containing red dye No. 2, a coloring agent whose use was prohibited last February by the Food and Drug Administration. An assistant United States at-torney, Elaine C. Buck, said the jam, in indivdual half-ounce packets, had been shipped by the manufacturer, Unit Portions Inc. of Lindenburst, N. Y., to a military installation in Williamsburg, Va., but had been returned as the result of an F.D.A. inspection, which found the prohibited dye. Red No. 2, which is believed by researchers to cause cancer, was banned when the F.D.A. said no satisfactory evidence of its safety had been submitted.

113,500 to Benefit as the Authority Bows to Pressure — Details May Take Up to a Month to Work Out

By STEVEN R. WEISMAN

Bowing to pressure from Mayor Beame and a group of legislators, the Metropolitan Transportation Authority yesterday granted half-fare privileges for 113,500 pupils who since last month had been paying the full 50-cent fare for trips on subways and buses to and from school.

The decision was a compromise accepted by the authority at a board meeting Monday night, and it was welcomed yesterday by both Mr. Beame and Assemblyman Leonard P. Stavisky, the Queens Democrat who had led the lobbying effort for weeks for weeks.

The administrative machinery for giving oot the half-fare passes may take as much as a month to set up, according to Ber-nard R. Gifford, the deputy school chancellor.

"This program presents us with a tremendous amount of cost and overhead," Dr. Gifford said. "We're going to have to collect the money from the kids, decide what kind of passes we should use and choosa the steps needed to safeguard it from ahuse."

The decicion by the authority was

The decision by the authority was a move to provide some relief to pupils who have traditionally been able to ride subways and huses free, but who lost this privilege because of budget cutbacks by the Board of Education.

The board had eliminated a $16.5 million subsidy that it had traditionally given to the transit system, and used the mooey instead for special programs for the handicapped. That decision ended free transportation for 113,500 pupils and improved higher for 52,000 others. posed higher fares for 63,400 others.

More Trusincy Was Feared

Mr. Stavisky and other state and city egislators argued that elimination of free legislators argued that elimination of free transportation would cause greater truancy, which in turn would cost the school system state-aid payments, which are pegged to attendance levals.

The Assemblyman and the Mayor's budget staff calculated that letting the 113,500 pupils ride for half-fare would actually make money for the Transit Authority.

thority.

Donald D. Kummerfeld, the city's Budget Director, said last week that without the fare break only 20 percent of the 113,500 pupils would ride on the transit system, bringing the Transit Authority $3.5 million, but that if they were permitted half-fare privileges, 50 percent of them would ride, bringing the Transit Authority $4.2 million. thority $4.2 million.

Mr. Beame brought Mr. Stavisky and transit officials together in a meeting last Friday to press the balf-fare proposal and yesterday the Mayor took credit for its adoption.

But Mr. Stavisky said he would continue to push Mr. Beame and the Board of Education to come up with a limited additional subsidy to permit the 113.500 pupils to pay even less than half the fare.
"Many parents and lawmakers believe this is only a first step," he said, "and that the city and Board of Education bould such make a small contribution.

should each make a small contribution to reduce the cost of each ride still furher. Such talks should continue.

But school and city aides ruled out the possibility of further subsidies becauseof financial constraints.

The elimination of free transportation expenditure of $20 or $40 a year for some children, depending on their grade and the distance they travel to school. The city continues to provide free transporta-tion for 124,000 children and reduced fares for 320,000 more.

Initially, the Transit Authority had been described as less resistant to allowing the half-fare than it was to the burden of administering a half-fare program.

Mr. Russo said yesterday that he and Robert A. Gasser, a County Freebolder, would meet with Stanley Van Ness, the Public Advocate, here tomorrow to discuss a course of action. # Inmates, for $30, Received Whisky In Cans of 'Juice'

STORMVILLE, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP)-Some inmates at the Green Haven State Correctional Facility have been receiving whisky mailed into the maximum-security facility in fruit juice cans, the state police said today.

The inmates paid $30 a can for tha whisky, which they received in the mail "disguised" as fruit juice sent from relatives, officials

Edward K. Bellezzi, 20 years old, of Mount Kisco, N. Y., was arrest-ed and charged with promoting prison contraband, a first-degree felony, according to the police.

They said that the smuggling operation, which reportedly involved about 16 inmates, had been going on for a few months but was recently stopped. No inmates have been arrested.

But since the contraband whisky operation was halted, Walter Fogg, the Green Haven superintendent, said guards have been having trouble controlling the manufacture of brew made by the inmates.

Mr. Fogg said that about 10 days ago the prison riot squad, armed with tear gas and guns, had been called out to put a group of drunken inmates back into their cells. He said that no force had to be used, however. He said the inmates had been making the liquor in wash buckets, using fruit peels or "anything that will cook."

Knicks Top Braves, 118-104; Barons Fall, 5-2, to Rangers

Haywood and Monroe Excel-3-0 Start Best Since '69

By SAM GOLDAPER

The Knicks are beginning to convert the nonbelievers.

In another exhibition of their new playing styl, the Knicks defeated the Buffalo Braves, 118-104, last night before a crowd of 12,228 at Madison Square Garden, It was the Knicks' third straight National Basketball Association triumph. Without a los, the first time they have opened with that many victories since the 1969-70 champion-ship season. Buffalo, still playing without Bob McAdoo, the league's leading scorer for the last three seasons, suf-fered its first loss in three games. McAdoo is sidelined with a lower back injury.

The optimism that is beginning to flow stems not so much from the fact that the Knicks unexpectedly have won all their game, but rather from the way they have won them. The Knicks are pushing the ball up quickly, running and looking to help each other offensively and defensively. The running game has prevented opponents from setting up their defenses

Haywood Shift a Factor

'Running is 60 perceot of our newfound success," said Spencer Haywood, who is slowly making the unselfish conversion to center. "There is no more standing around looking at each other. We're moving. Last season I would staod around and watch Cylde [Walt Frazier] dribble and he would look at me and hold the ball. I'm even beginning to learn how to pass the ball. There is no unselfishness on this club anymore. We're looking for each other and moving the hall."

Haywood scored 23 points and grabbed 15 rebounds. The cooversion from forward to center has moved him closer to the basket and facing it. It has made him more effective.

The Knicks shot 57 percent for the second straight game. They have bettered the 50 percent shooting mark in all three games. And, while the Knicks were on target, the Braves were far off, taking a club-record 120 shots, 30 more than the Knicks. But Buffalo made only 43 shots, and New York made 51, with Earl Monroe showing the way with 29 points.

The Braves' strength was in thei offeosive rebounding. The overall power of Adrian Dantley, John Shumate and Doo Adams allowed the Braves to grab 30 offensive rebounds, compared with four by the Kicks. At times, Buffalo got four and five shots at the basket. One of the Braves' problems, though, was that they took poor shots. Taking Early Command

The Knicks raced to a 13-4 advantage io the opening three minutes and increased their lead to 33-24 at the end of the first quarter on the strength of Monroe's 11 points. After 8 straight points, the Knicks' lead reached 16

four minutes into the second quarter. 'It's a great feeling to be able to watch the other teams play catch-up hall," said Monroe, one of three Knicks who bettered the 20-point mark. "Last season we were the guys playing catch-up. Now we're going right out and piling up big early leads and making the other guys play catch-up."

Murdoch, Hickey: 2 Each

CLEVELAND, Oct. 26-The Rangers' power play, the most effective in the leagu, accounted for three goals tonight as New York returned to .500 hockey with a 5-2 victory over a sluggish Cleveland Baron team.

Doo Murdoch, the 20-year-old right wing with an intuition for when and where to shoot, scored two goals to-night, raising his total to 11 goals in 10 games. Pat Hickey also scored two goals-both on the power play.

Although Phil Esposito was not among hie scorers, he did record two assists to become the seventh player in National Hockey League history to reach 700 assists.

Since changing their uniform, name and locale, the former California Seals had made a fine start htis season but tonight they were below their usual enthusiastic form. The Ranger youngsters, meanwhile, under less pressure then io recent games made fewer mistakes. Tomorrow night the Rangers meet the Bosoin Bruins in Madison Square Garden and the pressure will

Barons Get First Goal

Before tonight's game Murdoch met with his older brother, Bob, who plays for Cleveland, and was kidded about the publicity he had been receiving for his scoring feats. "I scored five goals in one game," said the Ranger rookie, smiling, "and now the fans expect me to score five all the time. I would have rather had three two-goal games than one five-goal game. He got no sympathy from his lesser-known hig hrother, whose Cleveland teammates had tacked a sign over his locker reading "Don

Murdoch's hrother.'

The Rangers played more cautiously and positionally than has been their habit, waiting for high percentage chances to open up during even-hand-ed situations and utilizing power-play opportunities to pour in the goals.

The Barons dominated the opening 10 minutes when Charlie Simmer scored for Cleveland, eluding Mike McEwen near the Ranger net and stuff-ing the puck under John Davidsoo. Davidson was making his first appearance in the Ranger net after a four-game stint hy Gilles Gratton.

But with a Ranger power-play goal by Hickey midway through the period, the Barons' orderly play gave way and their legs grew leaden. Their last game had heen on Thursday and the layoff apparently harmed them.

Murdoch Scores Twice

Rod Gilbert scored the second New York goal in the opening period, pick-ing up the puck at the Baron blue line and sprintiog past the only opponent back, Fred Ahern, a forward. The Rangers followed their excellent start with three goals io the second period. including two by Don Murdoch, one on goal by Hickey.

Gilles Meloche was the Baron goalie victimized by the Ranger attack. In the second period New York had 14 shots at him. Murdoch scored his second-period goal, oo two typically stinging shots, one an instant rifling of a crossice pass from Gilbert with the Barons two meo short. Then Murdoch came cruising down the right side and sent a 40-foot shot into Meleche's left shoul-

Eighty-six seconds later Eddie Brown, a kick-return specialist let go by Cleve-land last year because of lack of speed, returned a punt by the Cardinals' Terry Joyce 71 yards for the touchdown that sealed the victory, Washington's fifth

Joyce, a rookie, was the fourth and last Cardinal failing to tackle Brown, who ran mostly right up the middle of the field where the mud was the deepest.

The Redskins set a league record by recovering eight opponent fumbles and the Cardinals added two turnovers on Washington interceptions of Jim Hart's passes. History does not record what team, if any, ever won a N.F.L. game while turning the ball nver 10 times to an opponent.

Hart did a good job, with sound protection, in completing 17 of 31 passes for 215 yards and the Cardinals added 100 rushing for a total of 315 while the Redskins managed only 140 in all, just 23 hy rushing So much for statistics of a game played in weather conditions that had to rank on the career 10-worst list.

we'd have had a long march and senred" he said.

"Guilty? The guys I talked to didn't have any guilt problems," said John Mendenhall, the defensive tackle whn had his differences with Arnsparger. 'Hey, Boone, you feel guilty?"

Bill (Boone) Bryant, the cornerback, was sitting on a stool in froot of his locker. "No, I just go out and play my game," he said. Mendenhall also heard the news by telephone. A friend called me about 4 n'clock," be said. Did his friend sound bappy?

"Oh yeah, he's a Giant fan. But I can't say I'm happy."

McVay is an unknown factor to Mendenhall. Just an assistant coach "I used to see around." But the tackle had already got a good report on McVay from some of the Giants who played for the coach in the last twn years at Memphis of the World Foothall League.

Gary Shirk, the reserve tight end who played for McVay at Memphis, said, would put him in a class with Jack Pardee," the coach credited with holding the Florida Blazers together during the difficult last days of the W.F.L and now the acclaimed coach of the Chicago Bears.

When times were hard in the W.F.L., he kept the team together." said Shirk.
"I mean, 17-3, 8-4 (McVey's two-season record at Memphis) that's doing a heck of a job when people didn't know if they're going to play from one week to the next. And we were 3-2 the first year and ended up 17-3. I can't remember anything specific he did, but he turned it around."

Some players thought the coaching change might turn the Giants around.
"You had to expect it," said Jack Gregory, the defensive captain and right end. "Nuthing disrespectful to Bill, he brought e lot of talent here,

But even Gregory didn't expect the change so soon. "I thought if he lost next week, he'd be gone," he said, "We had no morale problem, but it was like Andy Robustelli said: If we kept losing,

it would start breaking up."

Now, instead of breaking up, some Giants feel they have been given a second National Football League season. "We're 0-7 but this is like starting all over again," said Al Simpson, the left guard. "Now ithings bappen." "Now it's up to us to make

"We tried a quarterback change and that didn't work. Maybe this might straighten us out a little hit. A kind of realism hit the place this morning."

Dick Vermeil, coach of the Eagles who beat the Giants, 20-7, in the second game of the season, was realistic on the phone today. 'Really the best way to change a team from losing is to get a lot better football players, not change the coach," he said.

Yanks May Lose Alexander

The Mets woo't lose any players to the free-agent pool, but the Yankees apparently will lose Doyle Alexander, the pitcher they acquired from Balti-more last June 15.

"We haven't closed the door, but chances are slim that he will sign," Jerry Kapstein, Alexander'a agent, said from his office in Providence, R. I. "It has nothing to do with our or their lack of effort. We've talked almost on a daily basis. We just have an bonest difference of opinion on something."

Neither Kapstein nor Gabe Paul, the Yankee president, would say what that difference was, but it appears to be Alexander's insistence on having a guaranteed number of starts during a season. The Yankees bave been known to satisfy players financially, but agreeing to a minimum number of starts for a pitcher is another matter.

Alexander and Gullett

Alexander and Don Guilett, the Cincinnati pitcher, were the last two players officially to become free agents. Their contracts with their teams expired at the end of the World

There was some speculation that the ankle injury Gullett suffered in the first game of the Series would affect his attractiveness to other teams.

But Kapstein, who also is Gullett's agent, said: "I was extremely gratified by the tremendous interest abown in Don. Only one club expressed some concern, but that club also said they would just have to see the doctor's report. All the other clubs told me they knew the fact that he was on crutches bad nothing to do with his pitching."

10 Free Agents Kapstein's

Kapstein represents 10 of the 25 free agents. His other clients are Dave Cash of Philadephia, Bobby Grich and Wayne Garland of Baltimore, and five Oakland A's-Bert Campaneris, Gene Tenace, Joe Rudi, Rollie Fingers and Don Bay-

"I doubt that any of my people will sign between now and Nov. 1," Kapstein said.

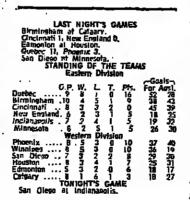

It is believed that at least some teams will meet their free agents' demands before next Monday, just so they won't lose the players. Kapstein. however, said he had no indication of that happening. Certainly not with Charles O. Finley, the agent added.

"I'm here if Charlie wants to contact me," Kapstein said of the A's owner, "but I don't plan to call him. Some

The closest the Braves got to catching the Knicks was 4 points. The only time the Knicks appeared to be in trouble was midway through the second period and in the opening min-utes of the third quarter, when the Braves exerted their control of the offensive boards.

Early in the third period, Buffalo cut the Knick advantage to 4 points, mostly on the strength of Adams's close-in shooting.

The university field the suit at United States District Court in Minneapolis and, Judge Edward J. Devitt was assigned the case. No date was set on when the matter would appear on the court docket. President C. Peter Magrath of Minne-

He said the university would seek a temporary injunction preventing the N.C. Magrath said the university was not opposing the probation placed on the basketball program last spring, but said the court action was necessary be-cause the N.C.A.A. had declared thro players guilty and punished Minnesota for not enforcing the action.

A difficulty in trying to pinpoint the causes of the drop in Scholastic Aptitude Test scores is that, in spite of the decline, there are still some signs that achievement has not deteriorated, particularly in reading, and that many young people are doing work far more difficult work than that demanded of their parents at the same age, especially. in mathematics.

Also, research projects conducted to determine the reading and mathematical abilities of adults have found widespread deficiencies that raise a serious challengs to the presumption that stu-dents of past generations were better prepared than those of today.

After all, it is hard to ignore the changes in mores and attitudes that were produced by the social upheaval of the 1960's.

Respect Held a Factor

Dwindling respect for authority, eagerness for instant gratification, hours of daily television-viewing, disintegration of family life and the use of drugs seem more likely than not to have had their impact on what takes place in the classroom.

Not that the schools themselves have not changed. For better or worse, there have been the effects of fewer students taking foreign languages, a more flex-ible curriculum, teacher militancy, a lower dropout rate and a higher college-going rate and a court-enforced loosening of discipline.

In such a climate, with research on the links between causes and effects still scanty, one of the dangers is thet the schools may be shoved toward simplistic steps that are supposed to shore up educational quality.

Mr. Howe, who is a vice president of the Ford Foundation, had this in mind yesterday when he warned that hasty measures for reversing the decline run more of a risk of disservice to American youth and American society than of doing anything useful."

"What worries me," he said, "is that we may overreact and iotroduce in schools a regimentation of learning that both denies what we know about the individual differences among children and the importance of motivation in producing learning and also denies the significant values of schooling un-measured by tests."

The action by the Chancellor-the third time a community board has been suspended since the decentralization of public schools in 1970-came after months of controversy involving charges $400,000 deficit had occurred because of of fiscal mismanagement and other irregularities.

In his letter of suspension, delivered to the board's offices at 433 West 123d Street, Mr. Anker said the district had had "a history of budgetary overexpenditures, fiscal mismanagement and serious difficulties in its administrative capabili-

"We're policy makers, not administrators," she said in response to Mr. Anker's charge that the board had failed to provide an accurate seniority list in laying age groups in school. Dr. Guy Vermeil, a pediatrician, for a book titled "Fatigue in School," covered younger schoolchildren as well and established another startling point. Thirty percent of children sent to his department in a suburban clinic, Dr. Vermeil reported, suffer from pains induced by "school trouble.

A typical case, the doctor said, would be of "a boy with a stomachache every morning except Wednesdays and Sundays, when there is no school." There were also several cases involving nightmares, loss of appetite or sudden depres-

Attached to Their Habits

According to Rector Henri Gauthien of them come down with psychosomatic the senior official in the Education Ministry, the trouble is that the French areattached to their habits. It is virtually which runs the school system nationally, has bene "nibbling away" at the summed vacation, gaining/a day one year, another day the next.

Another flaw in the school system here it is widely believed, is the length of les sons. They last 55 minutes each, though physicians say that the attention span of a 6-year-old is 25 minutes, of a 10-year-old 40 minutes and of an adolescent 50 minutes. Rector Gauthier disclosed plans for reducing lessons to 50 minutes, perhaps even to 45.

"The young need a time to work and time to dream," says the ministry's own study of the problem. One way of fighting fatigue in the schools, Mr. Gauthier said is to have difficult subjects, such as arithmetic, alternate with easier ones such as drawing.

Another way is to enliven the teaching by wider use of audio-visual methods, field trips and show-and-tell sessions, be said, because it is also monotony that

ngenders fatigue. Counteracting the Daily Slump

Still another way is to distribute the day's work in such a way as to take account of the children's daily cycle of energy and slump. "For instance," Mr. Gauthier said, "we have found that the children work less well after sports becausa that exhausts them, so sports classes should not come in the morning." The energy cycle, of course, is linked to sleeping habits and nutrition.

The traditional French breakfast, especially in Paris, is coffee, sometimes with milk and a roll or a piece of bread with butter. Dr. André Soubiran, a writer on medical subjects, has long campaigned -largely in vain-for a richer breakfast to fight midmorning loss of pep.

According to the parents' federation,
75 percent of children follow their parents' bad example, except that many take cocoa. Four percent of the children bave no breakfast at all.

As to sleeping bebits, the federation found that 30 percent of children aged and 8 did not sleep the minimum 10 nours, the proportion rising to 70 percent among those 13 and 14 years old.

All experts partly blame television for keeping children awake too late, but they also blame parents' ignorance of the numper of hours their children must sleep to be alert and bealthy.

Shirley Mezvinsky Lauro'a first play, "The Contest," an old-fashioned, naturalistic slice-of-life that takes place in a small town in the Middle West In 1943, rises far above its genre. Mrs. Lauro, a novelist, has a natural talent for the theater, and the production, as directed by Paul Austin at the Ensem-hle Studio Theater, is impeccable.

The play lightly wears a coat of nostalgia—the Green family hears "Lorenzo Jones" on the radio and period music is played between scenes—but it has the sincerity of a deeply personal memoir. On one level, the author asks what it was like to grow up poor and Jewish in a Protestant community. But the core of the play is not socio-logical or ethnic. It deals with a young girl, eager for life but shy about assert-ing herself, who admires her strug-gling father, and is both charmed and horrified by her impossible mother.

The mother, Lily, is "a card." As we meet ber, she is a little like Gypsy Rose Lee's mother, or a Jewish Auntle Mame, tossing off vaudeville gags, breaking into favorite routines. Her lifeblood is entering contests. Buying carloads of Bab-O, Ipana, and Peter Paul Mounds bars — and seriously depleting the family's meager earnings — she cuts out coupons and then coaxes her musically inclined daughter to help her write jingles.

Gradually we see that the mother is not only colorful, she is also a monster—totally solipsistic, prejudiced, nad uncaring about her family. Her incapacity in the kitchen—dinner is what-ever cold can she takes down from the cupboard - is indicative of a deeper maraise,

The play has a novelistic sweep, in three acts spanning a year and covering several levels within a family—from the Greens, the poor relations, to the cattle-rich Grossmans, led by Lilly's snobbish sister, who never lets her forget her second place.

A great deal of "The Contest" is funny, but it is not a comedy here funny, but it is not a comedy. Mrs. Lauro clearly is more interested in the dramatic confrontation of character, the formation under stress-of the personality of the daughter. In the dialogue and in the face of the actress, Loren Brown, we can see the tentativeness and the increasing helplessness as she is attracted, embarrassed and fin-ally humiliated by ber mother.

The play is heautifully cast and ex-ecuted. Miss Brown is tender and ap-pealing as the daughter. Mordecai Lawner, as the father, an immigrant with a Talmudic lilt to his speech, lets us see the pathos beneath a slightly crusty exterior (his daughter and her piano playing are his treasures).

Estelle Omens as the mother is something quite special. It would have been easy to play Lily for laughs or for tears: She could be a musical comedy. But Miss Omens keeps her lifesize, focusing on the character's pretentions and illusions. Even at her most selfish, she still has a childlike ingenuousness. Miss Omens gives a virtuoso perform-

Mrs. Lauro is dealing with familiar material in a traditional manner, but the characters are freshly observed, the situation richly specific, and the play has a dramatic impact. Mrs. Lauro is a playwright to be encouraged and Curt Dempster's Ensemble Studio Theater is to he complimented for perceptivity and for skillfulness in presentation.

International Society for Contemporary Music Holds Strenuously Forth at New England Conservatory

> By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG Special to The New York Times

BOSTON, Oct. 26-Since Sunday, the World Music Days of the International Society for Contemporary Music has been holding strenuously forth at Jor-dan Hall of the New England Con-servatory of Music. Strenuous is the correct word. The sessions call for two concerts a day, each some two hours long, filled with complex avant-garde music that taxes the minds of the listeners as strenuously as it taxes the capabilities of the performers.

Composers from 28 countries are represented, and most of them seem to be writing much in the same style and orchestrating much the same way. In the great days of the I.S.C.M., a program might contain new works by Stra-vinsky, Bartók and Webern-major composers, each representing a radically different style. But at these concerts there is generally an appalling conformity. Nearly all of the music is Serial or Serial-derived, inspired by Darmstadt or Princeton.

Andiences have been small, around 250 for any given concert. That is not unusual, and probably there would be no larger an audience anywhere in the world. The music of the international avant-garde has never had a beach-head that extended much beyond a head that extended much beyond a small group of professionals. Every-body here has been listening politely, but there has been very little enthusiasm. Only a few works among the 26 heard since Sunday afternoon have pierced the general gloom.

Few Departures From Serialism

It is interesting to note that those few works departed somewhat from the few works departed somewhat from the doctrinaire Serialism that the majority of the composers have adopted. Daniel Bortz of Sweden, in a short work named "Nightflies," worked up a lively atonal piece for a singer and a small instrumental group, and this was a score with some personality. Much interest also was paid to Oliver Knussen'a Symphony No. 2, a work that uses a soprano soloist throughout.

Mr. Knussen, from England, is the baby of the festival. He was born in 1952 and, as composers go, is a pro-tege. He composed this Second Sym-phony in 1971, when he was only 21 years old, and it is full of striking ideas that alternate with a rather glib, motor-istic quality. The score calls for high soprano, and Mr. Knussen means high. Christine Noel Whittlesey, who sang the solo part, was called upon to han-dle a tessitura far above the staff, with D's and E's above high C. Mr. Knussen also has written in optional A's above high C for some enterprising soprano of a future generation when, presuma-hly, singers are made differently. Else-where the score is dissonant, expres-sionistic and even has a few moments of real poetry.

But vocal settings in this range, and with syllables broken up in the modern manner, simply cannot be under-stood, and one wonders why the com-posers do not settle for vocalises. Many scores the last few days have called for singers. There was the Bortz "Nightflies"; the Music for Winds, Percussion, Cello and Voices by Rolv Yttrehus of the United States; the "Meridian" of Harrison Birtwistle of England, and the "Else" of Josef Tal of

Of these, only the Tal was composed in such a way that the words could be understood. Mr. Tal, a veteran com-poser, has in "Else55 composed a sensitive homage to Else Lasker-Schüler, a German poet who died in Israel. The score is mildly dodecaphonic, has tonal sections, and hreathes a gentle poetry. It had no success at all.

Nationalism is not part of the inter-national style. Even music by Oriental composers had all the cliches of construction and instrumentation. The "Stromung" of Yoshiro Irino of Japan, for instance, used the official avant-garde instrument—the vibraphone—together with elaborate percussion, and was one of the post-Serial works that is skilfully put together without evi-dence of any personality behind it. Music from Korea, Venezuela, Spain, Canada, Yugoslavia, Sweden, the Netherlands, Hungary and the United States came and went as though everything was a segment of one superpiece, to be listed out like a piece of tile on a kitchen floor. Among pieces that drifted a bit from the Serial conformity was J. M. Hor-vath's "Origines," the product of an Austrian (though Hungarian-born) com-poser who displayed some real muscle in his writing, and who made striking use of silences. There also was the Birtwistle "Meridian," a moody athematic setting of poems by Christopher Logne and Thomas Wyatt. Mr. Birtwistle supplemented his singer by a chorus of six sopranos who also were called upon to employ some percussion sounds. Hardly a word of the vocal settings could be understood, but the highly regarded English composer at least writes music that has real character, and he was one of the few. The Spruce Up program. "It was a problem because most people were skeptical," said Alonso Redwine, a homeowner who has lived in the area for 45 years. "The Federal Gov-ernment had given millions of dollars to farmers not to grow things, but it's the first time to my knowledge that any money has been given to the small homeowner. I was suspicious rayself.

And it took a lot of pursuasion."

The resistance, however, was owing to previous governmental inaction, rather than lack of desire on the part of the people in the area to npgrade it, according to some of the home-

'We Were Not Downtrodden'

Mrs. Thomas, an energetic woman who describes herself as a senior citizen, speaks with passionate enthusiasm about the area. "Oh, yes, we appreciate the painting and all," sha said. "But it's nothing that we haven't taken care of all along. We were not downcare of all along. We were not down-

Indeed, according to Bennie Wynn, the project director, and others on the corporation staff, the work that had to be done varied widely from building to building.
Some, for example, required only painting, although few brownstones remained brown, as residents, given the choice, selected such colors as bright yellow with red trim, and pink with black trim and gray with white

Intricate grillwork-bannisters, handrails and window guards—were generally in good shape and were painted, usually black or hunter green.

And while uniform cornice lines remained intact throughout the block, at the resident's request, the contractors paid special attention to preserving and reconstructing gargoyles and other concrete ornamentation.

Among the more extensive work was the building of an entire stoop and the re-creation of the entire facades of a few buildings that had crumbled badly.

Comparison With Downtown' Mrs. Thomas charged that where the properties had deteriorated it was frequently because of the city's "saddling us down with the multiple-dwelling law, making us put in bathrooms where there was no facility for it and other such things."

"These were family-occupied houses with maybe three or four roomers,"
Mr. Redwine put in. "Just like downtown in Gramercy Park or in the Village. But down there they talked about town houses and supplementing income. Up here they just stereotyped them as rooming houses and we were subjected to the same rules and regulations as the apartment buildings on

Eighth Avenue."
This, Mrs. Thomas maintained, was grossly unfair. The small-home owner up here, she said, operates withio a framework of "good will" in which roomers became, in effect, a part of the family.

"It was like an extended family."

owner here the boint of it and had to rely on whatever he could get under the circumstances."

Mrs. Thomas is especially resentful of what she views as an official attitude toward black residents that did not exist when whites lived in Harlem.

The whites were renting in far more substandard conditions than the kinds of things we were cited for," she asserted. "Why, when blacks came in like my mother, for example, they brought in electricity and others got rid of coal and all that hot air.

"And they never made a distinction between owner-occupied and absentee. The temptation of the inspector was that if it's beyond 110th Street, they're Still, she and others said, they had fought to do what they could to keep the neighborhood up, despite their sometimes meager means. Mrs. Thomas, for example, was so "desperate" for a brownstone in 1951 that she "cama in with three mortgages." And so did her sister, who lives next door. Now Mrs. Thomas—who is involved with both the council and the Central Harlem Association of Small Home Owners which she founded—believes that with the help of the development corporation the area may begin to attract more residents who would work to keep it a desirable community of

Mix It Up aBit'

"Like every neighborhood," said, "we have houses for sale. And we would like to interest people in com-ing back. Blacks as well as whites. We'd like to mix it up a hit-if they would like to be pioneers."

Local officials, as well as officials at the Herlem Urban Development Cor-poration, are optimistic—not just about what has been accomplished up to now but also about the possible ripple effect.

"There will be $2 million available from the state on an annual basis," said State Senator Carl H. McCall, a member of the corporation's board. who was instrumental in getting the funds. "And with the need for housing in Harlem, and with no money for new construction, this program could bridge the gap between no housing and the most sound, solid-stock hous-

"This is already a very stable population," said Donald J. Cogsville, acting director of the corporation, citing one of their studies. It showed that 60 percent of Herley residents had lived in cent of Harlem residents had lived in one place for five years or more, compared with 50 percent for New York

City as a whole. "Now, since we've hegun Spruce Up," he said, "we are starting to get calls every day from lawyers, judges, school teachers wanting to know how they can get a brownstooe." Mr. Cogsville said that he hoped that this move by the Harlem corporation— a subsidiary of the State Urban Development Corporation-would "start giving some signals" to private investors about the attitude of the state toward Harlem and its future. "For this kind of effort to really spread," he said, "we need private and Federal lovestment. If we got the right cooperation, we could see really signifi-cant turnaround in Harlem in the next

SILVER SCREENINGS Several years ago, on the occasion of the publication of his autobiography, Frank Capra was asked by a reporter for The New York Times to name the most professional actors he ever worked

"Spencer Tracy and Katharine Rep-burn," said the veteran director. "Undonbtedly. Always on time, always knew their lines. They were into every-thing on the set, constructively. And these were New York stage people who didn't look down on Hollywood." The result of this three-way collaboration, "State of the Union" (1948), adapted from the Pulitzer Prize-wmning political comedy by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, is seldom seen oow in revival houses or on televisioo.

The film runs today through Tuesday in the Hepburn series at the Regency Theater (724-3700).

Also today: "Bell, Book and Candle" (1958) at 8:30 P.M. at the Undercroit Coffeehouse of Christ and St. Stephen's Church, 120 West 69th Street (between Broadway and Columbus Avenue). Ad-

Fisher Measures Up to Carnegie

By DONAL HENAHAN

Amateur acousticians and possibly a few of the professionals as well have been husy drawing comparisons between the rebuilt Avery Fisher Hall and its elder sister, Carnegie, And in these opening days of the New York

Philharmonics season, an extraordinary con-Appraisal flation of circumstances gave any interested listener the opportunity to hear the same work in both halls, with the same orchestra and the same conductor.

The work, the Mahler Third Symphoney, was the final per-formance of the Philharmonic's Mahler Festival at Carnegie on Monday night this week under Pierre Boulez. This reviewer bad also heard the Philharmonic play Mahler's Third at Avery Fisher on last Thursday night in the season's opening subscription concert.

The first and most lasting impression was that the orchestra produced a splandid, satisfying sound io both halls. The Carnegie tone struck these unscientific ears as richer in the lower partials, or harmonics, but at Avary Fisher the fundamental notes were no

Resonance in the Feet

One of the pleasures of listening to orchestras at Carnegie has always been that certain loud low tones could be felt in one's shoea and thus in one's entire body. This was never possible in the old Avery Fisher, but io the new hall, with its woodeo floor, there is a similar foot-vibrating resonance. Easily

Does "Cousin, Cousine" bave a moral? "Yes, don't judge," she replied. "That'a the moral. Don't judge anybody."

The film was also a hit in France, she said, winning the coveted Prix Louis Delluc. However, it was at first hanned in Spaio (where it was later shown at the San Sebastian Film Festival and won second prize), and the Soviet Union refused to buy it, Mr. du Plantier said, "because they say it's anti-tening to the Mahler at Avery Fisher, this listener made check marks in the score at places where the sound was particularly beautiful or effective. Time after time, a mark went down at points where pianissimo playing was demanded in the violins and the winds. However, at the beginning of the fourth movement, where cellos and double basses alone are called on to float a triple pianissimo, "very slowly, mysteriously," the tone was less palpable in Avery Fisher than in Carnegie. On the other hand, the posthorn solos-trumpet in these performances—came through with greater tooal refulgence at the newer hall. To some extent, such differences may be traceable to the inevitable vagaries of performance from one night to the oext. (The Carnegie performance was considerably less polished even though it was the Philharmonic's fourth of the Mahler within five days.)

Brilliant Fortissimo Climaxes

But more significant than the differences were the similarities in the performances at both halls. Mr. Boulez's approach to the Mahler Third and to the Mahler orchestra was recognizably the same: Great emphasis was placed on clean attacks and releases, restrained expression and judicious halances. Fortissimo climaxes rang out bril-liantly at both balls, and at Avery Fisher one never had the old, familiar sensatioo during loud pas-sages that someone was alapping two planks together. Against one's expectation, the detectable differences between the performance at Carnegie Hall halls remain, of course. While lisproved to be the faster, more streamlined one, lasting about 93 minutes against not quite 98 on opening night at Avery Fisher.

In the old Avery Fisher, an orchestra was hard-pressed to sustain the excruciatingly long line that some Mahler conductors such as Jascha Horenstein and Leonard Bernstein have favored. Mr. Bernstein did it with great success at Avery Fisher at his valedictory concerts as the Philharmonic's music director, but the orchestra suffered with him throughout every agonizing oote, especially in the expansive finale. Mr. Boulez speeded up a bit at Carnegie, probably because later performances of any work tend to be faster and a bit more perfunctory than the first

Sustained Without Strain

How else does one account for the fact that the first movement at Avery Fisher took 34 minutes 25 seconds and the finale 21 minutes 51 seconds, while at Carnegie four nights later the same move-ments went off in only 32 minutes 37 seconds and 20 minutes 10 seconds? The assential point, bow-ever, is that the more sustained performance took place in the newer hall, and without sounding like er hall, and without sounding tike a strain on anyone.

On the whole, the comparison left this reviewer satisfied that New York has been extraordinarily lucky, at last: The new Avery Fisher is good, and yet not so dramatically different from or better than Carnegie to imperil the evistence of the great lady on West. existence of the great lady on West 57th Street.

Did the nude scenes in the film bother her? "Not at all," shereplied. "I'm not very beautiful, you know. I'm not Brigitte Bardot. But to be naked is just a way of life. Known for Tragedies

Before "Cousin, Cousine," Miss Barrault had been seen here only in Eric Rohmer's 1969 film, "Ma Nuit Chez Maud," in which she played a very pure young Catholic girl. She said she is known to French audiences mainly for playing tragedies, especially oo stage

Ooce I died under the window of a man who had left me. And once, io a German play, I gave myself an abortion on stage with a knitting needle. So I guess it was a surprise for the French public to see me in what is hasically a comedy."

One subject that Miss Barrault and her husband like to avoid is whether his job as head of France'a largest movie company has helped to promote her career.

"In France, they don't pay much attention to things like that, like whether we're like Norma Shearer and Irving Thalberg," insisted Mr. du Plantier, the scion of an aristocratic family stretching back to the

The couple, who were childhood sweethearts, have two children, David, Il, and Ariane, 7. They live io a mid-19th-century apartment oo the chic Rue Monceau in Paris, and do not socialize much with the French movie crowd, Miss Bar-rault said, "because directors might feel they were being pres-sured into taking me in their films."

She also denied that being tha niece of Jean-Louis Barrault bad given her a boost in the husioess. Oh, no, I grew up in a cooven! school absolutely away from him," she said. "He oever helped me in any way. I doo't think he was happy that I became an actress. My mother is a widow, and he thought I should have had a more serious job to earn money very soon to support her." After their New York visit, the couple flew to Hollywood to show their film to several American directors, including Alfred Hitch-cock. But even if Hollywood offers are forthcoming, Miss Barrault is not quite sure she will accept them.

"I just don't know, I don't want to be away from my bome," she said. "I feel really French in my blood. I could do a film jo a foreign country once perhaps twice, but oot more."

Her hushand smiled. "If we work harder and better. I think we can make a success with Freoch films." he said. "That way we can still

Will Your Family Be Hurt By New Estate and Gift Taxes?

Find out at a special Seminar, conducted by U.S. Trust Plaza Hotel, 9:45 AM, Tuesday, Nov. 9

If you're worth over $500,000, you should attend. Because the wealthier you are, the more the new tax changes may hurt you.

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 was signed October 4. But there are some steps you may be able to take to reduce its impact, if you act before January 1. In particular, you may want to make sizeable gifts.

These are the most sweeping changes in gift and estate tax rules in 35 years. Some changes are already in effect. Others go into effect on January 1, 1977. Others still later.

In the words of The Wall Street Journal. the new law "... could cost very rich families a lot of money while providing the modestly rich with less tax relief than they expect."

For example, the capital gains tax on inherited property may be much higher on future increases in value because of a significant change in the rules.

U.S. Trust, a leader in estate management, has organized a seminar which will be conducted in nontechnical language to help you understand these new rules. But, if you would like to bring your lawyer, you are welcome to do so.

It will be some time before the Internal Revenue Service and the courts define clearly every aspect of these revisions. But there is a good deal we know about these significant changes already, and we are pleased to share our knowledge with you.

Three tax and trust experts associated with U.S. Trust will discuss the highlights of changes in the rules governing estate and gift taxes.

The meeting will be short and to the point. You will be finished by lunchtime. Here are some of the important topics which will be covered:

The New Estate And Gift Tax Laws, And Things You Should Consider Before January 1, 1977.

The New Law And Its Effect On Your Taxes, Today and Tomorrow.

Trusts Are Not Dead: The New Tax Law And Its Effect O Long-Term Estate Planning.

The nominal fee for admission is $15.00 person to limit attendance to those whom this seminar is most important.

Please make reservations in advanc Call Mrs. Lois Ludwig at U.S. T. (212-425-4500) or mail the coupon be with your check for $15.00 to reserve a p at the seminar. (You can make reservat by phone.) Reservations will be made first-come, first-served basis.

LONDON, Oct. 25-Despite criticism from its political opponents, the Labor Government showed no signs lief tht Britain, in order to save the pound, might prefer to reduce its overseas commitments before cutting social prograss at home.

This was the stark and unexpected meassage contained in a warning last night from the Prime Minister. James Callaghan, who discussed Britain'a deteriorating economic situation with a panel of journalists on the British Broadcasting Corporation's "Panorama" program.

There have been persistent reports that the International Monetary as a condition of answering

Britain's request for $3.9 billion in standby credit, would ask tha Gov-ermment to make sharp-reductions in public spending and take other belttightening measures:

These reports have been denied here, in Washington and in other capitals. But the British Government is obviously worried that its creditors will seek to apply some new pressures, and it was with this in mind that Mr. Callaghan issued his warning to others out to try to push Britain to bard and too far "If, for example, the I.M.F. were

Mr. Sindona had previously told the Italian Government, according to the charges, that the funds were on deposit in other Italian banks.

The financier, now living at the Pierre Hotel in New York, held a major interest in the Franklin National Bank when it failed in 1974. # SAUDI'S PRICE STAND ON OIL HELPS SPUR 10.14 CLIMB BY DOW

'MODERATE RISE' IS SOUGHT

Market Steadiness on Monday and Ford Tax-Cut Proposals Seen as Factors in Advance

By ALEXANDER R. HAMMER

The Dow Jones industrial average spurted more than 10 points yesterday, with blue-chip, glamour and special-situation issues leading the way.

Analysts said an important factor in the upswing was an anouncement by a Saudi Arabian official that his country would press for only a "moderate rise" in oil prices at the Dec. 15 ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petrolaum Exporting Countries.

Previously, a few other OPEC countries had indicated they would seek oil price increases of 10 to 15 percent. Such a price rise would increase worldwide inflation, which has been easing.

The Saudi Arabian official, Alawi Darwish Kayal, who is Minister of Posts and Telegraph, said at a newa conference in Municum, Switzerland, that his Govern-ment's basic policy was "to help the West as well as ourselves." He declined to be specific about what price increasa his country would seek.

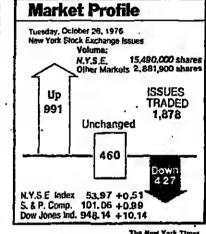

Rise of 5 to 7 Percent Predicted

An analyst commented that Mr. Kayal's announcement brought many investors back into the market. The analyst predicted that the OPEC nations would eventually agrea on an oil price increase of S

Nevertheless, Sea World was 22 bid on Monday, up from 171/4 bid Friday, which indicated to Mr. Gabelli that ar-bitrageurs were active, buying Sea World shares in anticipation that MCA would pay a tender fee to brokers and on the theory that MCA's bid would draw a rival suitor. Yesterday, Sea World closed at 23½ bid. He noted that MCA had $200 million in cash and equivalents, which suggests that a rival would have to have a substantial bank-

Mr. Gabelli was enthusiastic about the possibility of MCA's acquisition of Sea World since he believed the compa-

MCA Inc., the producer of the movie "Jaws," started buying Sea World Inc. last August, obtaining 8 percent of the marine park companys' shares from institutions through a West Coast broker at $14.96 a share.

Now the cash-rich Universal City Calif., entertainment complex and operator of recreation services is bidding for the rest of Sea World's shares at $22 a share.

Analysts who follow MCA are pleased as, no doubt, are Sea World shareholders, who can reasonably hope that some other company will step in and better MCA's offer.

David M. DeMotte, president and treasurer of Sea World, which derives most of its revenues from marine recreation parks in San Diego and near Cleveland and Orlando, Fla., is not pleased. "We think the offer inade-quate," he said in a telephone inter-

A spokesman for Sea World said its directors would meet Saturday to review the offer and its decision would be conveyed to share holders no later than Nov. 5.

Mr. DeMotte confirmed Wall Street reports that his company had discus a possible merger with MCA before it bought 8 percent of Sea World, adding that management had been surprised at the MCA purchase.

Management of Sea World, which controls just 100,000 to 120,000 of the company's 18 million shares outstanding, would not be in a position to thwart an aggressive takeover bid without outside help.

On the exchange, Her Majesty Industries Class A gained 1 to 171/2. The manufacturer of children's apparel said its board had approved an offer by Gulf and Western Industries to acquire all the assets of Her Majesty Industries for $18.75 a share.

One of the higger losers was Ohio Brass Company, which dropped 2¾ to 36 after reporting that its third-quarter net fell to 64 cents a share from $2.27 a share for a year earlier.

petitor who violates the law for triple damages.

"Marginal retailers in the city have gone bankrupt since the giant stores opened on Sunday," said Louis Powsoer, owner of a meo's wear store who appeared as president of the Joint Council of Kings County Boards of Trade.

Members of Mr. Powsner's group picketed in the morning outside the No.

2 building of the World Trade Center before the meeting convened on the 24th floor. The pickets carried signs urging an end to Sunday sales.

"The opponents of the Sunday closing law said it was antiquated," he continthan a seven-day week?" He added that sunday operations for owners of small stores imposed a "physical impossibility" for them, hurt resale values of business and required substitute personnel who were not substitute personnel were not substi sonnel who were not so effective as full-time employees.

A vigorous proponent of Sunday operations, Jerome B. Shier, executive vice president of Martin Paint Stores, which operates more than 40 stores in the metropolitan area, asserted that his stores' Sunday operations "have been profitable ... increased our vol-ume and oor profits! ... increased jobs and contributed more dollars to local and state taxes."

New York's Christown wants no sunday law, Yao T. Huang, president of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce of New York, told the legislators. "We thank the state for striking down the law. Chinatown's business depends solely on Saturday and Suoday, when many Chinese come here to shop. Many Chinese are Buddhists and do not observe Sunday as a boliday."

Waldbaum's Inc., a leading New York

area supermarket chain, will have 78 of its 100 stores in the metropolitan area operating this Sunday, Marvin Levy, vice president, said. "But we regret it," he added. "We are doing it for competitive reasons, and we hope it will not be for long. All Sunday business does is spread your six-day sales over seven days."

Steveo Jacoby, staff counsel for the New York Metropolitan Council of the American Jewish Congress, urged the Assemblymen "not to undertake the futile effort of reviving a Sunday law; the Sahbath provision of the old law is still in effect and I advise you to wipe that out, too."

But John H. Schmidt, who represented the Catholic War Veterans, said that Sunday must be preserved as a day of rest; let Sunday be a day to recew our spiritual values and not allow it to be an occasion to worldly goods."

FAO Schwarz to Open For Sunday Yule Sales

FAO 5chwarz will be the second Fifth Avenue specialty store to open its doors on 5undays during the coming Christmas shopping season.

Last week, Bonwit Teller announced that it would open nine of its 12 stores in this area on 5undays from Nov. 28 through Dec. 19. An FAO 5chwarz spokesman said that Schwarz, which specializes in toys and adult games, will also be open on those Sundays, but only on Fifth Avenue and not io any of its other 15 stores. The oil can penetrate minute openings in the surface of the egg. In eggs one or two days old, biological activity stops immediately. In eggs three to five days old, with least partially

The institute estimates that the cow-pea weevil—formally called Calloso-bruchus maculatus—destroya 24,000 tons of cowpeas worth $1.6 million each year in Nigeria alone.

Kodak Called Cautious

Although the Eastman Kodak Company is indisputably a high-technology enterprise, spending some 6 percent of sales (or more than $300 million this year) on research and development, its approach to "new ventures," as Walter Fallon, its president, calls them, ia cautious.

Mr. Fallon stressed this in recent appearances in California before se-curities analysts, whom he also told of Kodak's plans to ship a million of its newly introduced instant-picture cameras (listing for $53.50 and $69.50) by year's end and aeveral million more

The figures implied a Kodak intention to match swiftly or even surpass the Polaroid Corporation in sales of color instant cameras of the SX-70 type first marketed in 1972.

Both the Kodak instant picture system, invading the 25-year monopoly of Polaroid, and a line of high-speed document copy machines, Mr. Fallon said, fit Kodak's rules for entering new will permit growth of the Kodak enterprise. We must see an identifiable customer need which will be filled by the new product or program. We must assure ourselves that the expertise to properly develop the venture is within our reach. And we must feel that the fit extends, as well, to our capabilities in marketing, distribution and customer

An additional hope, Mr. Fallon indicated, is that a new product will be in "harmony" with others. He said sales of conventional photographic products had held up well after intro-duction of the instant-picture system in the United States late last June.

"Innovation in picture-taking expands the overall market," Mr. Fallon said.

Proposal for Flat-Rate Electricity Billing Is Assailed

BOSTON, Oct. 26 --- "Utter chaos" would follow if Massachusetts voters approved a referendum next Tuesday calling thing."

Mr. Olsen dismissed a Massachusetts them here. for so-called "flat-rate" electricity billing, the president of one of the state's leading ndustrial employers said today.

Kenneth H. Olsen, president of the Digital Equipment Corporation, made the statement at a shareholders' meeting that approved a three-for-one stock split and was told of quarterly sales and earnings increases of 46 percent above the same period last year.

The flat-rate billing proposal by groups associated with Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, would require the state's Utilities Department to set rates for industries, hospitals, universities and other large users equal to those for householders, regardless of differences in electricity-distribution costs. The measure is designed to encourage conservation and provide rate relief to small electric con-

The proposal is strongly opposed by organizations, particularly universities and hospitals, whose rates would rise, but Mr. Olsen's criticisms were among the most outspoken to date from individ-ual business leaders in Massachusetts. In a news release, Mr. Olsen said that his company's $4.6 million electricity hill in Massachusetts would rise 37 percent, or $1.7 million under the plan The release said, "Flat rates would stifle the ability of companies to grow

It added, "Ditigal would probably not lay off employees if Question 7 were approved, but enactment of the measure would undoubtedly result in significant ob losses throughout the state over the

In the quarter ended Oct. 2, the company's operating revenues were $205 million, compared with $140 million a year earlier, and $232 million in the preceding quarter. Earnings per share were $1.29, compared with 95 cents a year earlier and $2.11 in the preceding quarter.

Mr. Olsen told a news conference after the shareholders' meeting that the company's employment of 13,000 in Massachusetts, out of a worldwide total of 26,000, was probably "already too big," having increased 3,000 in the last year.

He said, "No state should be that de-

mal Finance: Controversy ets Graduated Mortgage Plan

Even a H.U.D. spokesman described

G.M.P. as having been put forward with

"hope." "It depends on persuading the lenders to go along with it," he said.

G.M.P. is basically an experiment, limited to 1 percent of all the F.H.A. loans made in a year. An estimate of 20,000 to 30,000 G.M.P. loans a year, the H.U.D. spokesman added, would be "concrous and boreful"

G.M.P. offers the borrower five dif-ferent options. Three of them allow the monthly payments to escalate at the rate of 2.5 percent, 5 percent or 7.5 percent over the first five years of the loan. The two other options allow esca-lations of 2 percent or 3 percent a year

At the beginning of the sixth year or the 11th year, depending on which option is chosen, the payments level

Here's how the arithmetic works out for a borrower who elects an annual

3 percent increase over 10 years on a 30-year mortgage of $35,000 carrying an interest rate of 8.5 percent.

In the first year, the borrower would pay $223 a month in interest and amortization, or $46 less than a standard level payment loan of $269 a month.

The payments would rise to $237 a month in the third year, to $251 in the fifth year, beyond the level cost of $269 to $274 in the eighth year and even out at $330 a month in the 11th

Thus, the payments could be tailored in a rough way to what a borrower thinks the rise in his income will be.

In effect, though, he is borrowing more money to finance the shortfall in the early payments. The unpaid interest is added to the borrower's mortgage bal-

Under a standard level payment mortgage, the borrower would pay back a total of $96,840 over the 30-year term. With a G.M.P be would pay back $102,674—a difference of $5,834.

A key question is whether the borrower thinks that kind of premium is worth the comparetively small reductions (they range from a maximum of $46 to a low of $3 a month) in the first seven years of payments.

Other variations available under the

In general, the longer period of gradua-tion, the lower the mortgage payments

Some bankers, however, think all of the arithmetic will be made moot by the somewhat higher cost of servicing G.M.P. loans and potential conflict with state truth in lending and banking my that we would go into a downward spiral, then we must have to say that these countries themselves and the LM.F. must accept the political consequences of what you are malling us do," the Prime Minister said.

Mr. Callaghan's warning followed a day that saw a precipitous drop in the value of the pound below $1.60. The pound stabilized today at $1.59.

The Prime Minister said he was "not threatening anybody," but he went on to suggest that, as a last resort, Britain might have to reduce overseas commit-ments in order to reduce the load on

"We are still a very considerable power in terms of influence in the world," he said. "Our contribution to the Army on the Rhine is a substantial one. Now, if we are pushed, because there is a shortterm problem, into a position where we would have to make a choice as to whether we carry on these responsibilities or whether we have to say, 'Sorry, our eco-nomic situation demands that we put our own position first,' this would be a very serious matter for Europe.

Drawing the Line

Mr. Callaghan and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Denis Healey, feel they bave gone about as far as they can in squeezing the public and testing the pa-tience of their political allies in the Labor Party. They bave imposed limits on wages, ordered some freezes and even some reductions in spending plans, and raised interest rates to record levels.

But the opposition Conservatives and many bankers want still more deliberate deflation, and today the Tories seized on Mr. Callaghan's suggestion about reducing Britain's European commitments as a sign of the bankruptcy of Labor Party

Pound Problems Continue With New Low of $1.59

LONDON, Oct. 26 (AP) - The British pound slipped to another record low of $1.59 today after steadying briefly as the Government discussed how to recover from yesterday's worst single-day drop in history.

Dealers were nonplussed by the late

Some said they slide of more than I cent. Some said they could only attribute it to reaction to a statement by Bryan Gould, a Labor Mem-ber of Parliament, advocating a devalua-tion in the pound to $1.50.

Today's pound closing was almost a half cent down from the closing yesterday of $1.5950. At one point yesterday it tradedat $1.5730.—7½ cents off the Friday closing of $1.6481.

The pound's response to the economic suggestions of a little-known legislator showed how nervous the market is as Britain prepares to welcome International Monetary Fund representatives who will study the hooks and recommend what study the books and recommend what strings to attach to the $3.9 billion loan Britain seeks to stave off bankruptcy. A report in The Sunday Times—the main factor in the pound's decline—said that the United States and the LM.F. had agreed that the pound should drop to $1.50 as a condition for the $3.9 billion loan. According to the report, the LM.F. believes a $1.50 pound would make British exports easier to sell.

The British economy has been suffering a crisis of confidence, and the pound has dropped from $2 since March 5. Britain's principal financial problems are inflation of almost 14 percent a year, a budget deficit of more than $20 billion, low productivity and high unemployment.

The Government said unemployment fell from 6.2 percent in September to 5.8 percent in mid-October. But most of the drop came from young people getting their first jobs, and there was nnly a minor change in the "hard-core" unem-

Interdependence of Economies
Many of his Labor supporters, however, saw Mr. Callaghan's comments as a timely reminder that the economies of the world were more interdependent than ever, and that nobody would gain if Britian was forced to reduce the standard of living of its citizens and, in consequence, its purchasing power as a nation in world markets.

"What I want to make clear," Mr. Callaghan said, "is that we have to get sustainable growth."

EUROPE DROUGHT CALLED SPUR TO POTATO EXPORTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—Drought in Europe earlier this year has behed cause a 160 percent rise in United States potato exports, according to a new analysis by the Agriculture Department.

Officials said, bowever, that 1976 United States production would be a record and that consumers would bave plenty of potatoes this winter. But the effect of the larger exports on domestic retail prices is not clear at this time, according to the department's Economic Research Service said in a current season for an arrangement by: Albalilies $2.700, assets $350.000.

Magazines Urged to Be Aggressive

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY Special to The New York Times

SOUTHAMPTON, Bermuda, Oct. 26-Magazines, nnce the only national advertising medium, are nnw looked upon unly as carriers nf special promotions or send-off coupoos by many of the major advertisers.
That's what William Tenehruso, seninr vice president and media director of Wells. Rich, Greene, told members of the Magazine Publishers Association this morning at the Southampton Princess Hotel.

And he urged them to adopt a defen-sive and aggressive strategy—protect-ing a current important client such as liquor and cigarets while at the same time going after the country's top 25 advertisers whose overwhelming adver-tising spending is in television. In most media, with the exception of newspapers and magazines, the top 100 advertisers represent the majority of the advertising. Newspapers have bad the local support, and magazines, Mr. Tenehrusn said, are left with "a bunch of small advertisers" who are in magazines because of their small hudgets or because they like maga-zines' selective audiences or fur their ability to showcase an ad.

He cited the disparate spending in television of such companies as Proctor & Gamble, Sears, Warner-Lambert and Bristni-Myers and asked, "How is it you guys can let it happen?"

Whet the magazine people should be doing, he said, is hitting the major advertisers with magazine research at every apportunity and demanstrating the tangible advantage of adding megezines to telavision as a way to maintain advertising impressions at a time of rising costs.

He said his nwn gnal was to increase the magazine spending of all his agen-cy's clients every year. The first exam-ple of that, he noted, was the Trans World Airlinea account, which increased its megazine advertising 58 percent (from 7 percent of total hudget to 11.1 percent) last year.

With Mr. Tenebruso at the crack-of-dawn seminar on advertising sales was Charles A. Tucker, group vice president of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, the country's top magazine advertiser. And although he spoke glowingly of the medium he was not without a com-plaint or two.

"Sometimes it seems you take us for granted-married us for our money," he said going on to ask his listeners for more research on target audiences and to salesmen who know more about the advertisers' wants and needs.

Other research could be done on the effectiveness of a spread as opposed to two, full-page separated ads in the same magazine; the effects of clutter. the best separation for competing clgarette brands, and the hest use of adver-tising copy tallured to its editorial envi-Mr. Tucker also asked that publishers

In the course of his talk entitled, "Is there life after television?" he spoke kindly of magazines and their ability to pinpoint specific markets, also ob-serving, "Magazines can be held in the hand, studied, shown to a friend, carry coupons and can challenge the mind-needed for corporate survival.

Now how does he feel since getting accustomed to using all forms of print advertising?

"I'm not at all sure we'd run back to television with open arms," he said.
At the general session that inllowed At the general session that inflowed the seminars, Seymnur Lieberman, president of Lieberman Research, reported on the study of how and why people huy magazines done for the Publishers Clearing House. Based on lengthy personal interviewe with 1,326 persons over 18 years of age, the study showed that 76 percent of them bought at least one magazine a year but also at least one magazine a year hut almost half of all magazines were purchased by "heavy huyers," described as those who huy nine or more different titles a year.

These people, who constitute only 21 percent of magazine buyers, are, Mr. Lieberman reported, more desirable advertising audiences in every way. They are younger, have a higher income, are better educated, spend more, are contemporary and upheat and are more involved in life generally.

Nnnhuyers, nn the other hand, "show a degree of social alienstion." Sn much fur them.

The study also disclosed an error in the conventional wisdom that has it that people who buy a magazine on the newsstand will spend more time with it than a subscriber who has paid

Publishers in recent years have been making readers pay more for maga-zines, increasing both cover prices and subscription rates. Mr. Lieberman warned them to be careful in this area since the study showed that only 38 percent of subscribers and 49 percent of huyers of single copies would continue to get as many magazines if prices continued to go up. The majority of those questioned said they would either drop some or all of the publications they now read.

'Moderate' Price Rise In Oil Held Saudi Aim

Alawi Darwish Kayal, Saudi Arabia's Minister of Posts and Telegraph, said yesterday at a news conference in Montreux, Switzerland that his Government would seek a "moderate" in-crease in oil prices at the Dec. 15 meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. He declined to provide any figures.

"We know," the Saudi minister add-ed, "that the rate of inflation attribu-ed, "that the rate of initiation attributable to oil is only 2 percent. In OPEC, they are thinking that, because of inflation, hey must raise prices a little just to take care of inflation."

"I assure you," he added, "that Saudi Arabia will maintain its stand as a responsible member of the international community. We will use our influence to try and make it a moderate increase."

William Tenebruso Seymour Lieberman

Some kind words for the editorial side of magazines came from Peter Clarke Jr. chairman of the department nf jnurnalism of the University of Michigan, who said, "I'd like the talk about editorial leadership in the world of thought and innovation. My thesis is simple. More often than unit, magazines are the medium where ideas first surfece for public consumption, Magazines are the place where new issues take shape and new anxieties are first

The new mooey is to be used for floodlights, an ultramodern security system, a cafeteria, a concrete roof and other improvements. The architect talks also of possible future Phase 4, 5 and 6 grants, and the community's hope of generating enough profit from rents to start oew projects. There is also hope of some day getting a private mortgage on the building, which would be another source of funds for new ventures and for sustaining the community corporation itself.

All of this is the Federal Government's first effort at heavy subsidizatinn of a community-run industrial real estate enterprise, the backers say. They are boping that the idea will catch on elsewhere in the country.

Meanwhile, tenants are oeeded. They have oot flooded in, even though the rents of about $1.50 a square foot are far below cost. Unsubsidized, comparable space might cost almost twice as much, Mr. Schwartz said.

Besides R & N. Knitted Headwear, which has 21,000 square feet of space and 75 employees, the only other occupant so far is a Federally funded jobtraining organization, Project T.R.U.E., with 2,500 square feet on the top floor.

Annther clothing maker, Robert Richarde Inc., which makes women's sportswear in a decaying loft a few blocks away, bas signed a lease for 42,000 square feet—the entire second floor—and intends to move in when preparatory work is complete oext mooth. Richarde employs 120 people

One of the floors in the Brooklyn building that was renovated by Williamsburg Industrial Development Enterprises.

Renting has been hurt by the weak-oess of the industrial market in gen-eral, said Sheridan Mechaber of the .C.A. Realty Company in Queens, the broker who brought in Richards. But he said that the Williamsburg build-ing would be fully rented given six months to a year. The best bope is from the innumerable small companies in and around the Brooklyn and Queens waterfront, he added.

With no taxes due to the city, it will take only $125,000 to $150,000 in rent income a year to break even, real estate sources estimate, a poiot that would be reached when the building is about half filled.

Ooe special source of pride to the mainly black, Hispanic and Hassidic leaders of the community organization is the vegetable "farm" that has been built on the roof. It is a ooe-acre "hydroponic" food factory, said Frank Lockard, vice president of Miracle Gardens Inc., which installed it under a $30,000 Government contract. There is oo soil, but the plants are fed from nutrients pumped through a system of pipes in which the potted plants sit. Crops from the "farm" will be sold at reduced costs to plant workers—a fringe benefit, the maangement says. One future plan is to acquire and demolish some abandoned neighbor-bood buildings to create additional parking. At present there are 2,500 square feet for parking, and, under Phase 3, 10,000 square feet are tn be added.

Jack Beerman, one of the partner-owners of Richarde, which is moving in next month, said he signed a fiveear lease with a renewal option. "The big thing for us wer to get space all on one floor," he added.

Some private real estate operators were outraged by the Williamsburg project, feeling that in 1970 nr 1971 the building could have been marketed privately, upgraded and rented out at no public cost. Instead, vandalism increased the cost of improvement during the long vacancy period. "It was a waste of taxpayers' mnney," said one investor.

On the other hand, the enterprise bas brought forth an outpouring of community pride and cooperative effort, on display at the celebration last week. Nor is it conceivable that private and concei vate capital could or would have cre-ated such amenities at marketable rents. "The community really accomplished what it set out to do," said Mrs. Maria Badillo, bead of the com-munity corporation. "There is no need for industry to move out."

clips from other sources, not only film

and documentary but also other television series, such as WGBH's "Relian inordinate amount of time is devoted to native folk songs, which do not happen to be one of this writer's enduring passions. Chain-gang songs, sea chanties and railroad sagas get ex-ceedingly repetitive very quickly.

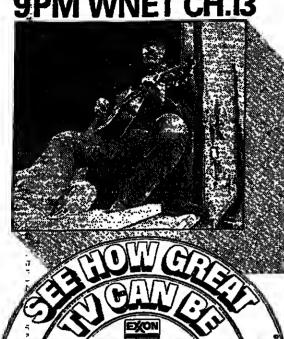

By far the best part of the project is saved for the final half-hour beginning with "Beautiful Dreamer" and a complete and marvelous rendition of "After the Ball Is Over."

This is followed, at long last, by a survey of black jazz, particularly the blnes. Film clips of Bessie Smith and Billie Holiday, which I've seen on other TV programs several times in the last couple years, remain thrilling. Louis Armstrong and Jack Teagarden do their routine on "Ol' Rockin' Chair's Got Me." Lena Horne, recorded at Hollywood's Coconut Grove, sings "The Lady Is a Tramp," spiced with some bitter side comments about her experiences in film.

This is followed by some nonsense about a truck driver listening to Johnny Cash on his radio, but "Amazing Grace" concludes with a lovely piece by Charles Ives. "The Things Our Fathers Loved" proclaims "Now hear the songs, I know not what are the words are there. The words are there."

"Amazing Grace" provides a glimpse of the possibilities for an extensive TV series that would examine all of them in more than superficial skimming.

As a rather elaborate anthology. Amazing Grace-America in Song" is neither amazing nor particularly graceful. Produced and directed by Allan Miller for WNET/13, the 90-minute program to be shown at 9 tonight is a collection in search of a point. At the outset, John Steinbeck is quoted to the effect that you can learn more about effect that you can learn more about people by listening to their songs than anything else. But "Amazing Grace" attempts to do too much, winds up doing too little and we learn less about people than about a variety of tunes.

To begin, quite imaginatively, there is the national anthem, sung by a diverse collection of Americans at a football game in Boston's Fenway Park. This is followed by a minuscule ethnic football game in Boston's Fenway Fark.

This is followed by a minuscule ethnic tapestry incorporating snippets of Puerto Rican, Irish, Italian and German music. The scene switches to a school-room to listen to a class wend its charming way through "Mrs. Murphy's Chowder." And then the Allman Broth-ord ord discovered in a giant arena chowder." And then the Aliman Brothers are discovered in a giant arena, with Greg Allman doing one of his Ray Charles imitations. The group is introduced to the huge audience by Jimmy Carter. Which raises the delicate point about the specter of equal time for Gerald Ford, introducing, say, the Captain and Tennile.

Taken in small pieces, "Amazing Grace" can be very impressive. There is Phyllis Curtin singing an Emily Dickenson poem, set to music and played on piano by Aaron Copland. There is a wonderful old woman in North Caroa womerful on woman in Notal Carlina extolling the virtues of rural life
("You can have your own fun here and nobody hardly bothers you"). But taken as a whole, the center of the program doesn't hold.
